

HERE TO HELP

The Office of the Immigration Detention Ombudsman (OIDO) is an independent and neutral office—separate from ICE and CBP—that is committed to humane treatment and safe living conditions for all individuals in U.S. immigration custody and detention.

If you experienced poor treatment or conditions while in immigration detention, OIDO would like to know. OIDO is a neutral and independent office of the Department of Homeland Security—separate from U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE), U.S. Customs and Border Protection (CBP), and the detention center—that monitors conditions and treatment in immigration detention facilities. OIDO employs trained case managers, inspectors, and auditors who work to address complaints and improve conditions for all detainees.

Complaints filed with OIDO are confidential, and case managers will not reveal any information about your case without your consent. Talking to an OIDO case manager or filing a complaint will not affect your immigration case or detention status.

Visit dhs.gov/OIDO to submit a complaint form. Scan the code for instructions.

ISSUES YOU CAN REPORT TO OIDO INCLUDE:

Physical, mental, or emotional abuse

Inadequate food or medical treatment

Poorly maintained or unsanitary bathrooms and rest areas

Lack of access to hygiene items (toilet paper, towels, toothbrushes, etc.)

Poor or unsafe living conditions

You can also ask OIDO about any other substandard conditions or suspected violations of policies or standards.

OIDO is an independent office within the Department of Homeland Security.
