I believe (b) (6) is covering this—My understanding is that (b) (6) asked her to check with us on any work we had done on this issue and then follow up on the matter. When it came in, I was on SL at an medical appointment, and you were on AL—so I think (b) (6) was drafted. I had not had any further contact then the voicemail left by (b) (6) and I told (b) (6) that I thought the same for you as I think (b) (6) simply called us because he has worked with each of us in the past. I am not sure if she needs our assistance. I know she leaves for vacation on Thursday—let's touch base with her together tomorrow and then we can figure out any next steps. Sound like a plan?

Sorry if I'm behind the curve on this, but I wanted to see if we needed to take any action on this Threat Assessment. It appears that it was assigned to (b) (6) but I wanted to check with you to see if I should follow-up on this.

Also, I'm out of my meetings so let me know if I can help with any taskers!

(b) (6) I left both of you voice mail messages in which I described this issue in greater detail. There is attached to this email a threat bulletin being disseminated by the Office of Emergency Management in Pittsburgh in which it discusses the threat posed by the Occupy Pittsburgh campaign and the hackers' group: Anonymous. Both myself and (b) (6) (IO deployed to the PACIC Center in Harrisburg) are somewhat concerned that several items contained in this Intel Bulletin might be advocating surveillance and other countermeasures to be employed against activities protected under the 1st Amendment. Would either one or both of you be able to see what could be developed from this document that (b) (6) could take back to the Intel staff that produced this so that in the future they have a greater awareness of how to develop intelligence assessments that don't undermine Constitutionally protected speech and assembly rights?

Yes, I think general guidance rather than responding to every inquiry from the DHS I&A field reps at fusion centers would be the best course of action. I do think it would be helpful to get a better idea of what types of requests they are encountering—but regardless, general INFORMAL guidance would be best. I say informal guidance, because in my view, formal guidance would be specific policy advice on each individual inquiry. Let me know if you have any more questions on this. Also, do you think it makes sense to work with Priv to get on the same page?

Hi (b) (6)

We received a request from SLPO for formal CRCL guidance related to the Occupy Wall Street protest. Since this is the first request of this kind that I've seen, I wanted to double check with you before moving forward.

My initial recommendation is to request that (b) (6) provide us with a specific question. Based on her email below SLPO has received numerous requests, and I believe that understanding the question would assist us in framing a response.

As a secondary matter, I wanted to see whether you would like us to develop policy guidance on this topic? Or, alternatively we can make ourselves available to component partners or intelligence officers who request information on First-Amendment protected activities. My recommendation is for CRCL to draft general guidance, rather than taking on ad hoc questions about Occupy Wall Street.

Please let me know if you agree with the approach to (1) request additional information on the types of requests SLPO is receiving; (2) draft initial guidance for your review.

Thanks,

All,

We have received a number of questions and requests for information regarding Occupy Wall Street from a number of component partners and intelligence officers. Recognizing that this is a first amendment-protected activity, we have recommended (on an ad hoc basis when we received requests) that our Intelligence Officers refer inquiries to Fusion Centers and avoid the topic altogether. That being said, given the number of requests that have appeared, we would like to equip the field with formal guidance as they will likely continue to receive requests like this from Fusion Center partners. We would greatly appreciate formal guidance from CRCL and/or Privacy (whatever you all would prefer to do) sooner rather than later to make sure the all in the field are acting in accordance with CRCL and Privacy policies. Thank you for your help!

Also, if you could, please cc SL Support on the response as they are the intake point for requests and it would be helpful for them to have this on hand to provide in case someone misses our e-mail.

Below is my tweaks to the email that Scott Matthews drafted. I've used bold and underline to note the language I've added. Please advise.

(b) (6)

PRIV and CRCL supports the position that the Occupy Wall Street-type protesters mostly are engaged constitutionally protected activity. We maintain our longstanding position that DHS should not report on activities when the basis for reporting is political speech. We would also be loath to pass requests for more information on the protests along to the appropriate fusion centers without strong guidance that the vast majority of activities occurring as part of these protests is protected. To do otherwise might give the appearance that DHS is attempting to circumvent existing restrictions, policies, and laws.

To a large degree, these protests are no different from any other protests/events from civil liberties, civil rights and privacy perspectives. The issue is not the assembly of the groups nor the message of the participants, it is only (as far as DHS is concerned) illegal or suspicious behavior related to a DHS mission that occurs during the protests. A possible exception would be reports on the environment created at the protests sites that would endanger public health and safety.

So there are certainly some circumstances that may allow limited reporting on behavior that is coincident and collocated with "Occupy Wall Street" like protests. Persons demonstrating illegal or suspicious behavior and attempting to use the protests to obscure their activity could be reported, as long as there is no attempt to link the suspicious/illegal behavior to first amendment protected activity. Indeed, the normal CRCL and PRIV guidance used for HIRs and intelligence products would apply, as it is only the behavior which is being addressed.

It would be helpful to see some of the RFIs received from the field to get a better idea of exactly what type of information is being requested, if we were to reconsider issuing more formal guidance.

We hope this short and quick response will be helpful, but if the desire for formal guidance still exists, we would be happy to start the drafting process. Inevitably, drafting formal guidance would require a bit more time to gain the necessary clearances.

New post on GREY COAST ANARCHIST NEWS

Eugene: SUV covered in anti-oil, pro-occupation graffiti and set on fire

by greycoast4narchists

From RegisterGuard. October 14, 2011.

Perhaps the people responsible for torching a graffiti-covered Toyota 4-Runner in west Eugene on Wednesday night really did want to send a political message.

But at this point, police say they don't know who set the fire or why they did it — despite the fact that the burned sport utility vehicle was covered with miscellaneous graffiti that included an anarchist symbol and messages consistent with those of the nationwide “Occupy” movement protesting economic inequities.

Eugene police spokeswoman Melinda McLaughlin said it would be “unfair to blame any one group” for the arson.

“The graffiti is all over the map,” she said.

Eugene firefighters rushed to the corner of West 13th Avenue and Grant Street just after 9 p.m. Wednesday and found the red SUV engulfed in flames. Police arrived at the scene a short time later and determined that the blaze had been set intentionally. The damage was estimated at $5,000.

Before lighting the vehicle on fire, someone had used white paint to scrawl onto the vehicle a number of messages that included “Occupy Eugene,” “99%,” “Oil is Bad” and “No Exxon” — along with an anarchist symbol and a profanity directed toward Eugene Mayor Kitty Piercy, police said.

Piercy said she spoke Thursday with police about the fire, and added that she hopes authorities track down the people behind the “dangerous” incident.

“Of course I don't like to see hateful graffiti aimed at me or anyone else,” Piercy said. “Especially when it is linked to a violent act such as this one.”

Meanwhile, organizers with Occupy Eugene — an offshoot of the national movement that last month began staging demonstrations on Wall Street — were quick to distance their group from the arson.

Occupy Eugene spokeswoman Crystal Stanford said the group is part of “a peaceful movement” that does not condone violence or property destruction.

“My first thought (upon hearing of the SUV fire) was that people would think that we were on the fringe,” Stanford said. “We're a populist movement, and our values are consistent with the values of the everyday, normal person.”

She added that group members “love the mayor. Kitty Piercy is on our team.”

While he said he had no idea who might be responsible for the fire, Eugene author and anarchist John Zerzan said he is certain anarchists are participating in “Occupy” events locally and elsewhere, and that their beliefs differ greatly from “peaceniks” who “never want to get off the sidewalk.”

“Some people want to take (the movement) in a militant direction, and some don't,” Zerzan said.

Police continue to investigate the arson case.

McLaughlin said the 4-Runner's most recent registered owner — who does not live in Eugene — sold it about a year ago.

She said investigators did not want to publicly identify the person to whom it was sold.

Police have not spoken with any witnesses who saw the fire being set.

Neighbors on Thursday said they did not recognize the vehicle as belonging to anyone in the area.

In 2000, a pair of self-proclaimed anarchists in Eugene set fire to three SUVs at the former Romania truck lot off Franklin Boulevard.

The two men, Jeffrey Luers and Craig Marshall, later pleaded guilty to arson charges and went to prison.

Hey (b) (6)

I saw the request that came in for guidance on whether I&A can do a product on Occupy Wall Street. We got a similar request from SLPO last week and we collaborated with Privacy to come up with a joint response. The response below was cleared by (b) (6) I wanted to share this with you to initiate our discussion:

PRIV and CRCL supports the position that the Occupy Wall Street-type protesters mostly are engaged in constitutionally protected activity. We maintain our longstanding position that DHS should not report on activities when the basis for reporting is political speech. We would also be loath to pass DHS requests for more information on the protests along to the appropriate fusion centers without strong guidance that the vast majority of activities occurring as part of these protests is protected. To do otherwise might give the appearance that DHS is attempting to circumvent existing restrictions, policies, and laws.

To a large degree, these protests are no different from any other protests/events from civil liberties, civil rights and privacy perspectives. The issue is not the assembly of the groups nor the message of the participants, it is only (as far as DHS is concerned) illegal or suspicious behavior related to a DHS mission that occurs during the protests. A possible exception would be reports on the environment created at the protests sites that would endanger public health and safety, where the health and safety concern relates to a DHS mission.

So there are certainly some circumstances that may allow limited reporting on behavior that is coincident and collocated with Occupy Wall Street-like protests. Persons demonstrating illegal or suspicious behavior and attempting to use the protests to obscure their activity could be reported, as long as there is no attempt to link the suspicious/illegal behavior to first amendment protected activity. Indeed, the normal CRCL and PRIV guidance used for HIRs and intelligence products would apply, as it is only the behavior which is being addressed.

It would be helpful to see some of the RFIs received from the field to get a better idea of exactly what type of information is being requested, if we were to reconsider issuing more formal guidance.

We hope this short and quick response will be helpful, but if the desire for formal guidance still exists, we would be happy to start the drafting process. Undoubtedly, drafting formal guidance would require a bit more time to gain the necessary clearances.

Good afternoon. I'm (b) (6) a Domestic Terrorism analyst with the Homeland Counterterrorism Division. I ran across this today and was interested in a possible write up of the event for the state and locals. Before I spent the time writing on this, however, I'd like to know what objections CRCL might pose to such a product concerning the Occupy movement—which has thus far been nonviolent. Please take a look at below and let me know what you think.

New post on GREY COAST ANARCHIST NEWS

Eugene: SUV covered in anti-oil, pro-occupation graffiti and set on fire

by greycoast4narchists

From RegisterGuard. October 14, 2011.

Perhaps the people responsible for torching a graffiti-covered Toyota 4-Runner in west Eugene on Wednesday night really did want to send a political message.

But at this point, police say they don't know who set the fire or why they did it — despite the fact that the burned sport utility vehicle was covered with miscellaneous graffiti that included an anarchist symbol and messages consistent with those of the nationwide “Occupy” movement protesting economic inequities.

Eugene police spokeswoman Melinda McLaughlin said it would be “unfair to blame any one group” for the arson.

“The graffiti is all over the map,” she said.

Eugene firefighters rushed to the corner of West 13th Avenue and Grant Street just after 9 p.m. Wednesday and found the red SUV engulfed in flames. Police arrived at the scene a short time later and determined that the blaze had been set intentionally. The damage was estimated at $5,000.

Before lighting the vehicle on fire, someone had used white paint to scrawl onto the vehicle a number of messages that included “Occupy Eugene,” “99%,” “Oil is Bad” and “No Exxon” — along with an anarchist symbol and a profanity directed toward Eugene Mayor Kitty Piercy, police said.

Piercy said she spoke Thursday with police about the fire, and added that she hopes authorities track down the people behind the “dangerous” incident.

“Of course I don't like to see hateful graffiti aimed at me or anyone else,” Piercy said. “Especially when it is linked to a violent act such as this one.”

Meanwhile, organizers with Occupy Eugene — an offshoot of the national movement that last month began staging demonstrations on Wall Street — were quick to distance their group from the arson.

Occupy Eugene spokeswoman Crystal Stanford said the group is part of “a peaceful movement” that does not condone violence or property destruction.

“My first thought (upon hearing of the SUV fire) was that people would think that we were on the fringe,” Stanford said. “We're a populist movement, and our values are consistent with the values of the everyday, normal person.”

She added that group members “love the mayor. Kitty Piercy is on our team.”

While he said he had no idea who might be responsible for the fire, Eugene author and anarchist John Zerzan said he is certain anarchists are participating in “Occupy” events locally and elsewhere, and that their beliefs differ greatly from “peaceniks” who “never want to get off the sidewalk.”

“Some people want to take (the movement) in a militant direction, and some don't,” Zerzan said.

Police continue to investigate the arson case.

McLaughlin said the 4-Runner's most recent registered owner — who does not live in Eugene — sold it about a year ago.

She said investigators did not want to publicly identify the person to whom it was sold.

Police have not spoken with any witnesses who saw the fire being set.

Neighbors on Thursday said they did not recognize the vehicle as belonging to anyone in the area.

In 2000, a pair of self-proclaimed anarchists in Eugene set fire to three SUVs at the former Romania truck lot off Franklin Boulevard.

The two men, Jeffrey Luers and Craig Marshall, later pleaded guilty to arson charges and went to prison.

Attached please find my first crack at a response to the Pittsburgh threat assessment. Per the way (b) (6) has raised this issue to us, I'm focusing on general principles (with some digressions on how they would apply to the product in question), rather than redlining the actual report. I spoke with (b) (6) on Friday and got some additional detail about the fusion center in question and how this product came to be that I think will be helpful as you look at what I've written. Can we meet briefly tomorrow to discuss?

There is attached to this email a threat bulletin being disseminated by the Office of Emergency Management in Pittsburgh in which it discusses the threat posed by the Occupy Pittsburgh campaign and the hackers' group: Anonymous. Both myself and (b) (6) (IO deployed to the PACIC Center in Harrisburg) are somewhat concerned that several items contained in this Intel Bulletin might be advocating surveillance and other countermeasures to be employed against activities protected under the 1st Amendment. Would either one or both of you be able to see what could be developed from this document that (b) (6) could take back to the Intel staff that produced this so that in the future they have a greater awareness of how to develop intelligence assessments that don't undermine Constitutionally protected speech and assembly rights?

Hey (b) (6)

I agree with your concern. I think you've drafted a good response below. My only point of divergence is that I believe a product written about the incident of vandalism, if it does not attribute the vandalism to OWS would not be a Homeland Security issue. Although this question falls within OGC's authority to determine, if the basis for reporting is a single incident, not the general movement, the single incident does not appear to be a Homeland Security issue.

I fear that no matter how you parse a potential report, any product on OWS which seeks to report on the movement in general, or the potential for violence nationwide would be largely reporting on First Amendment-protected activity.

I am concerned that this may be misinterpreted by recipients or lead to improper action on the basis of an I&A report.

I'm happy to discuss this further with you. Please let me know what you think.

I expect that the analyst considers the single incident to be an incident of domestic terrorism (similar to ELF attacks on SUVs), and would argue that the DHS authority to report would be based on this being a suspected domestic terrorism incident. I think a reasonable case could be made for that.

W/r/t a larger report on the Occupy movement, do you mean that you don't think CRCL could clear on any product on OWS, generally? I tend to agree that it would be difficult to clear on that, given that any concerns out of the movement thus far are local matters: reasonable time, place, and manner restrictions on protests, health and safety issues, etc, all seem to be situational awareness issues (not domestic terrorism-related) that apply only to locals dealing with particular protests, and therefore, lack a DHS nexus for reporting. Given that their only foray into illegal activity, as a movement, seems to be violating permit rules and clashes with the police over removals (mostly, but not exclusively, though civil disobedience tactics), a product would tend to appear as merely reporting on First Amendment activity. What do you think of adding this to my draft:

Subject: Occupy Wall Street Request

I saw the request that came in for guidance on whether I&A can do a product on Occupy Wall Street. We got a similar request from SLPO last week and we collaborated with Privacy to come up with a joint response. The response below was cleared by (b) (6) I wanted to share this with you to initiate our discussion:

PRIV and CRCL supports the position that the Occupy Wall Street-type protesters mostly are engaged in constitutionally protected activity. We maintain our longstanding position that DHS should not report on activities when the basis for reporting is political speech. We would also be loath to pass DHS requests for more information on the protests along to the appropriate fusion centers without strong guidance that the vast majority of activities occurring as part of these protests is protected. To do otherwise might give the appearance that DHS is attempting to circumvent existing restrictions, policies, and laws.

To a large degree, these protests are no different from any other protests/events from civil liberties, civil rights and privacy perspectives. The issue is not the assembly of the groups nor the message of the participants, it is only (as far as DHS is concerned) illegal or suspicious behavior related to a DHS mission that occurs during the protests. A possible exception would be reports on the environment created at the protests sites that would endanger public health and safety, where the health and safety concern relates to a DHS mission.

So there are certainly some circumstances that may allow limited reporting on behavior that is coincident and collocated with Occupy Wall Street-like protests. Persons demonstrating illegal or suspicious behavior and attempting to use the protests to obscure their activity could be reported, as long as there is no attempt to link the suspicious/illegal behavior to first amendment protected activity. Indeed, the normal CRCL and PRIV guidance used for HIRs and intelligence products would apply, as it is only the behavior which is being addressed.

It would be helpful to see some of the RFIs received from the field to get a better idea of exactly what type of information is being requested, if we were to reconsider issuing more formal guidance.

We hope this short and quick response will be helpful, but if the desire for formal guidance still exists, we would be happy to start the drafting process. Undoubtedly, drafting formal guidance would require a bit more time to gain the necessary clearances.

Last week, (b) (6) and I received this request for CRCL's concerns regarding an incident of vandalism and arson in Eugene, OR, which might be tied to the Occupy movement, or might be related to eco-terrorism or other domestic terrorism. We've crafted a proposed response, but believe this is something we should probably coordinate a CRCL-wide response for. What do you think?

Eugene: SUV covered in anti-oil, pro-occupation graffiti and set on fire

by greycoast4narchists

From RegisterGuard. October 14, 2011.

Perhaps the people responsible for torching a graffiti-covered Toyota 4-Runner in west Eugene on Wednesday night really did want to send a political message.

But at this point, police say they don't know who set the fire or why they did it — despite the fact that the burned sport utility vehicle was covered with miscellaneous graffiti that included an anarchist symbol and messages consistent with those of the nationwide "Occupy" movement protesting economic inequities.

Eugene police spokeswoman Melinda McLaughlin said it would be "unfair to blame any one group" for the arson.

"The graffiti is all over the map," she said.

Eugene firefighters rushed to the corner of West 13th Avenue and Grant Street just after 9 p.m. Wednesday and found the red SUV engulfed in flames. Police arrived at the scene a short time later and determined that the blaze had been set intentionally. The damage was estimated at $5,000.

Before lighting the vehicle on fire, someone had used white paint to scrawl onto the vehicle a number of messages that included "Occupy Eugene," "99%," "Oil is Bad" and "No Exxon" — along with an anarchist symbol and a profanity directed toward Eugene Mayor Kitty Piercy, police said.

Piercy said she spoke Thursday with police about the fire, and added that she hopes authorities track down the people behind the “dangerous” incident.

“Of course I don’t like to see hateful graffiti aimed at me or anyone else,” Piercy said. “Especially when it is linked to a violent act such as this one.”

Meanwhile, organizers with Occupy Eugene — an offshoot of the national movement that last month began staging demonstrations on Wall Street — were quick to distance their group from the arson.

Occupy Eugene spokeswoman Crystal Stanford said the group is part of “a peaceful movement” that does not condone violence or property destruction.

“My first thought (upon hearing of the SUV fire) was that people would think that we were on the fringe,” Stanford said. “We’re a populist movement, and our values are consistent with the values of the everyday, normal person.”

She added that group members “love the mayor. Kitty Piercy is on our team.”

While he said he had no idea who might be responsible for the fire, Eugene author and anarchist John Zerzan said he is certain anarchists are participating in “Occupy” events locally and elsewhere, and that their beliefs differ greatly from “peaceniks” who “never want to get off the sidewalk.”

“Some people want to take (the movement) in a militant direction, and some don’t,” Zerzan said.

Police continue to investigate the arson case.

McLaughlin said the 4-Runner’s most recent registered owner — who does not live in Eugene — sold it about a year ago.

She said investigators did not want to publicly identify the person to whom it was sold.

Police have not spoken with any witnesses who saw the fire being set.

Neighbors on Thursday said they did not recognize the vehicle as belonging to anyone in the area.

In 2000, a pair of self-proclaimed anarchists in Eugene set fire to three SUVs at the former Romania truck lot off Franklin Boulevard.

The two men, Jeffrey Luers and Craig Marshall, later pleaded guilty to arson charges and went to prison.

Dear (b) (6),

Thanks for inquiring with CRCL as to concerns that we would have with regard to a write up of the incident in Oregon where an SUV was vandalized and set on fire. Given that the Occupy Wall Street-type protesters mostly are engaged in constitutionally protected activity, we maintain our longstanding position that DHS should not report on activities when the basis for reporting is political speech.

As you note, the Occupy movement has thus far been largely non-violent. There have been some arrests, and any violence thus far seems to be limited to clashes between some individuals who are or may be associated with the movement (the order of events in Oakland doesn't seem to be clear) during attempts to remove protestors from certain locations or enforce curfews.

In a product on the incident in Eugene, we'd be particularly concerned about attribution of the incident. The article notes that the police say they don't know who set the fire or why they did it, and while some of the graffiti contains slogans consistent with some of the Occupy movement's protests, the police say it would be "unfair to blame any one group" for the incident, and the spokesperson for Occupy Eugene denounced the event and said it was not part of their tactics. Unless there is other intelligence that indicates that the vandalism can be attributed to the group, the product would have to be very careful not to attribute the incident to the movement.

If I&A believes the incident in Eugene merits nationwide reporting, it would be preferable for I&A to write up the incident in a manner that takes care not to attribute the action to Occupy (absent further information), rather than to write a general product about Occupy and add to that product a write-up of the incident (as the context of the product would make it difficult to convey that we have no information that the incident may be fairly attributed to Occupy, rather than someone merely sympathetic to their ideology). Generally, it would be difficult for DHS to justify a product on the Occupy movement at this time. As you note, the movement has been largely non-violent, and what criminal activity has taken place has mostly been of the civil disobedience variety (failure to secure/overstaying permits, non-violent resistance to arrest), with occasional violent resistance to being removed from a location/arrested, etc., and it is unclear what is appropriately attributable to the Occupy movement versus individuals who may later enter into a conflict with policy. Other concerns appear to be health and safety related (use of heating equipment, disposal of trash, etc). As these concerns generally are localized and not related to domestic terrorism, to our knowledge, it would be difficult for DHS to justify a product on what is largely First Amendment protected activity that doesn't appear to have a nexus to a DHS mission.

Please let us know if there's anything else we can do to help.

The purpose of this additional sentence is to allow for a dialogue where we might offer more specific feedback, or respond to questions regarding the product in question. I think you make good points. I'd like to use the specific guidance you've drafted in a very strategic manner. I believe it is in the best interest of our office to develop a positive working relationship with the folks who requested our input. In light of this goal, I'd like to initiate a dialogue with them by providing a general response and opening the door for further discussion. The strategic approach I intend to take is as follows:

First, I will send an email that provides very high-level guidance and invites further dialogue. Out of this initial response I will ask the POC whether they have specific questions or concerns we have not fully addressed.

Second, I anticipate that the POC may seek specific guidance that is the same vein of what you've drafted. I'd like to use the verbiage you sent in your last email the basis for providing detailed guidance. I would like to use the specific guidance you've drafted during the course of a dialogue, rather than send them all of our thoughts at once.

I appreciate your write up of this and we'll re-engage on this topic once I hear back on my email to the POC.

I understand your discomfort with the level of detail in my first draft, as the Pittsburgh office has not asked us for advice. I do, however, think it would be helpful to give as detailed advice as possible without referencing a specific product, and in particular, to emphasize what I think is the major problem with this particular product (and has been an issue with other fusion centers): understanding the congruence concept as much as possible, and understanding that open source is not a license for reporting. With that in mind, I've taken another stab at a shorter and less specific but still fairly detailed version. What do you think?

Hi (b) (6)

(b) (6) and took a look at this while you were on vacation last week. You did a great job at laying out the analytic framework for considering when its permissible to research and report on 1st Amendment activity and a great job also at analyzing the actual product. However, I am not comfortable with us sending up that level of detail on the actual product given that the Fusion Center has not sought out assistance, and given our role, especially in (b) (6) absence, I think it best to try and engage them in a softer method, i.e., -by providing (b) (6) guidance that he can send to them along with our offer to open a dialogue with them where we can later provide direct feedback on their product. Attached is what I propose we send to (b) (6) but in the body of an email. Let me know what you think.

(b) (6) & (b) (6)

Attached please find my first crack at a response to the Pittsburgh threat assessment. Per the way (b) (6) has raised this issue to us, I'm focusing on general principles (with some digressions on how they would apply to the product in question), rather than redlining the actual report. I spoke with (b) (6) on Friday and got some additional detail about the fusion center in question and how this product came to be that I think will be helpful as you look at what I've written. Can we meet briefly tomorrow to discuss?

(b) (6) I left both of you voice mail messages in which I described this issue in greater detail. There is attached to this email a threat bulletin being disseminated by the Office of Emergency Management in Pittsburgh in which it discusses the threat posed by the Occupy Pittsburgh campaign and the hackers' group: Anonymous. Both myself and (b) (6) (IO deployed to the PACIC Center in Harrisburg) are somewhat concerned that several items contained in this Intel Bulletin might be advocating surveillance and other countermeasures to be employed against activities protected under the 1st Amendment. Would either one or both of you be able to see what could be developed from this document that (b) (6) could take back to the Intel staff that produced this so that in the future they have a greater awareness of how to develop intelligence assessments that don't undermine Constitutionally protected speech and assembly rights?
Thanks in advanced, really appreciate all your help.

Subject: Occupy Guidance

Good afternoon,

I was advised by Scott Mathews that you are the point person for CRCL regarding the Occupy protests. FPS was notified of the guidance to the I&A representatives to restrict production of all Occupy products absent criminal activity and/or life safety issues. FPS has followed this guidance and restricted and/or rescinded all products (both internal and pass-through). FPS has been asked by GSA to provide a briefing on Occupy at the senior executive level. We are looking for additional guidance on the briefing. Would the attached document be acceptable to provide to GSA and other FPS stakeholders regarding Occupy or does it need to be limited any further?

I appreciate any guidance you can offer.

Subject: First Amendment Rights Guidance

All,

As “Occupy” products continue to be disseminated by various non-DHS parties, we urge you to review the following CRCL guidance that they have thoughtfully crafted for our use. If you ever feel you are put in a situation where first amendment rights could be potentially violated, please refer to the below guidance, which was created after we received a number of questions from around the nation in reaction to the Occupy protests. Also, please feel free to share this with analysts who will find this helpful when crafting products for their Fusion Centers.

Activities such as speech and assembly (both of which are implicated in the planned “occupy” protests) are protected by the First Amendment and generally DHS would not collect information or report on these types of activities unless we had a compelling interest to do so. Below is some general guidance that we hope you find helpful.

- The government may never collect or disseminate information based solely on First Amendment protected activities, or conduct investigations on that basis.
- Generally, reporting should be about the violence or criminality of a particular individual or group. Reporting on activities without a nexus to violence or criminality often raises First Amendment concerns.
 - To justify research into and creation of a product containing First Amendment-protected activity, personnel should consider whether they have a lawful predicate (e.g. a lawful purpose to perform their authorized law enforcement functions or other activities, that is not based on the protected activity itself).
 - Once a lawful predicate has been established, personnel should ensure the scope of the research and reporting on First Amendment-protected activity is limited to the threat posed. This is often referred to as congruence.
- The treatment of groups that may be involved in the First Amendment protected activity or related events should be even-handed and free of bias (e.g., not reporting more extensively or negatively on one group based on their viewpoint alone).

Please let us know if you have any other questions, or if you require CRCL support in any other way. The CRCL office has been extremely helpful and responsive on this issue and they stand ready to assist.

Best,

Subject: RE: Guidance Requested: Occupy Wall Street

PRIV and CRCL supports the position that the Occupy Wall Street-type protesters mostly are engaged in constitutionally protected activity. We maintain our longstanding position that DHS should not report on activities when the basis for reporting is political speech. We would also be loath to pass DHS requests for more information on the protests along to the appropriate fusion centers without strong guidance that the vast majority of activities occurring as part of these protests is protected. To do otherwise might give the appearance that DHS is attempting to circumvent existing restrictions, policies, and laws.

To a large degree, these protests are no different from any other protests/events from civil liberties, civil rights and privacy perspectives. The issue is not the assembly of the groups nor the message of the participants, it is only (as far as DHS is concerned) illegal or suspicious behavior related to a DHS mission that occurs during the protests. A possible exception would be reports on the environment created at the protests sites that would endanger public health and safety, where the health and safety concern relates to a DHS mission.

So there are certainly some circumstances that may allow limited reporting on behavior that is coincident and collocated with Occupy Wall Street-like protests. Persons demonstrating illegal or suspicious behavior and attempting to use the protests to obscure their activity could be reported, as long as there is no attempt to link the suspicious/illegal behavior to first amendment protected activity. Indeed, the normal CRCL and PRIV guidance used for HIRs and intelligence products would apply, as it is only the behavior which is being addressed.

It would be helpful to see some of the RFIs received from the field to get a better idea of exactly what type of information is being requested, if we were to reconsider issuing more formal guidance.

We hope this short and quick response will be helpful, but if the desire for formal guidance still exists, we would be happy to start the drafting process. Undoubtedly, drafting formal guidance would require a bit more time to gain the necessary clearances.

Subject: Guidance Requested: Occupy Wall Street

All,

We have received a number of questions and requests for information regarding Occupy Wall Street from a number of component partners and intelligence officers. Recognizing that this is a first amendment-protected activity, we have recommended (on an ad hoc basis when we received requests) that our Intelligence Officers refer inquiries to Fusion Centers and avoid the topic altogether. That being said, given the number of requests that have appeared, we would like to equip the field with formal guidance as they will likely continue to receive requests like this from Fusion Center partners. We would greatly appreciate formal guidance from CRCL and/or Privacy (whatever you all would prefer to do) sooner rather than later to make sure the all in the field are acting in accordance with CRCL and Privacy policies. Thank you for your help!

Also, if you could, please cc SL Support on the response as they are the intake point for requests and it would be helpful for them to have this on hand to provide in case someone misses our e-mail.

Emergency Services: Emergency Management

Alameda County, CA –Alameda County Sheriff's Office, with the support of the Bay Area Urban Area Security Initiative, launched a Homeland Security training exercise today to test the newest life saving technology for first responders. The exercise known as Urban Shield 2011, incorporates principles of the National Response Framework to assist tactical first response teams, both local and international. Participating agencies will be able to evaluate their level of preparedness and ability to perform intricate first responder operations while training with Law Enforcement, EMS, Fire, and EOD to identify their ability to cope with large scale events. Urban Shield 2011 is designed to strengthen each agency's preparedness to respond to threats and domestic terrorist attacks, major disasters, and other emergencies. The exercise will conclude on 17 October.

Nationwide – As of 14 October, the "Occupy Wall Street" movement continues nationwide with protests occurring in the cities of San Diego, New York, Washington D.C., Atlanta, Detroit, Denver, and Seattle. Clean-up efforts were postponed today at Zucotti Park in Manhattan after demonstrators cleaned the park themselves to prevent from being removed. The protest campaign began last July with the launch of a campaign website calling for a march and a sit-in at the New York Stock Exchange.

~~(U//FOUO)~~ NATIONAL CYBERSECURITY AND COMMUNICATIONS INTEGRATION CENTER BULLETIN Details On "Anonymous" Upcoming US Operations: 17 September 2011: Occupy Wall Street; "US Day of Rage"

~~(U)~~ Anonymous has come out publicly supporting a 17 September 2011 protest on Wall Street, originally announced by the group "Adbusters" on 13 July 2011. According to the Adbusters Web site, it hopes to motivate 20,000 Americans to congregate on Wall Street. Similar acts are emerging targeting financial districts in Madrid, Milan, London, Paris, and San Francisco during the same time frame. The Adbusters are coordinating logistical activities and news distribution for Occupy Wall Street using their public facing Web site, OccupyWallSt.org.

~~(X)~~ The Anonymous YouTube^{USER} video uses information from the Adbusters' "Tactical Briefing," calling for protestors to adopt a nonviolent "Tahrir-acampadas model." The call is for members to "flood into lower Manhattan, set up tents, kitchens, peaceful barricades and occupy Wall Street for a few months... Once there, we shall incessantly repeat one simple demand in a plurality of voices."

~~(U)~~ According to their public Web site, Adbusters publicly stated its intent to conduct nonviolent protests to "demand that America's resources be invested in human needs and environmental protection instead of war and exploitation."

~~(U)~~ Adbusters is also scheduling an upcoming peaceful protest targeting the Washington, DC National Mall in October 2011, which is motivated by the 10th anniversary of the invasion of Afghanistan and the beginning of the 2012 federal austerity budget.

~~(U//FOUO)~~ "ANONYMOUS" Upcoming US Operations, Impact, and Likelihood

~~(U)~~ The loosely organized hacking collective known as "Anonymous" has announced through several mediums that they plan on conducting cyber attacks, peaceful protests, and other unspecified activity targeting a variety of organizations.

~~(U//FOUO)~~ Occupy Wall Street: NCCIC assesses that it is likely peaceful protests will occur on Wall Street on 17 September 2011. These protests may be accompanied by malicious cyber activity conducted by Anonymous.

~~(U//FOUO)~~ Operation Facebook^{USER}: NCCIC assesses that it is unlikely that a coordinated or sophisticated cyber attack will be conducted by Anonymous (at large) targeting Facebook.com on 5 November 2011. However, there remains the possibility that low-level or lone-wolf attempts may occur.

~~(U//FOUO)~~ Project Mayhem: NCCIC assesses that a combination of inconsequential physical mischief and potentially disruptive malicious cyber activities will be conducted leading up to the culmination date of 21 December 2012. At this point, specific tactics, techniques, and procedures (TTP) are unknown.

~~(U//FOUO)~~ Operation Halliburton: Little is known about this potential upcoming operation. NCCIC assesses that targeting US corporations is consistent with past Anonymous targets.

~~(U)~~ Hacker Group Anonymous Threatens New York Stock Exchange

~~(U)~~ On a 2 October 2011 video message posted on a YouTube^{USER} channel associated with the hacker group, Anonymous declared "war" and threatened to "erase" the New York Stock Exchange (NYSE)^{USER} from the Internet on 10 October 2011. The threat was not explained.

~~(U)~~ It is likely the group is referring to a distributed denial-of-service (DDoS) attack on the public-facing NYSE.com Web site.

~~(U)~~ This type of activity would be similar to DDoS attacks the group has used to take down Web sites in the past and would not cause significant or lasting damage to the NYSE or its ability to operate. Others speculate that Anonymous may go beyond a DDoS attack on the NYSE.com and may attempt to disable actual trading on the exchange.

~~(U)~~ On 4 October, some Anonymous members expressed on Web forums that the 10 October threat is fake and planted by law enforcement to step up action against the hacker group and turn public opinion against their cause.

~~(U)~~ The Anonymous-associated YouTube channel has been used to post several "Occupy Wall Street"-related video messages, including some from Anonymous, since the protest against lax regulation of the financial sector and growing economic inequality began on 17 September 2011.

Subject: Anonymous Threatens To Hack Fox News Over Occupy Wall Street Coverage--MMC IOI # 5969-11

Location: Global

Anonymous, a group of hackers that has previously attacked Sony and Bay Area Rapid Transit, said it will shut down the Fox News website on November 5. The group announced its intentions in a video on YouTube, citing Fox News' propaganda against the Occupy Wall Street movement as a reason.

"Anonymous introduces Occupation Fox Hunt," the video's disembodied voice said. "It intends on destroying the Fox News website because their continued right-wing conservative propaganda can no longer be tolerated."

The group, which is affiliated with fellow hacker group LulzSec, specifically mentions a primetime host for attacking the "character and credentials" of the occupiers.

A spokesperson for Fox News said that they pay a great deal of attention to security every day. Though precautionary measures will be taken, this is no different from an average day.

¹ A reasonable belief arises when the facts and circumstances are such that a reasonable person would hold the belief. Reasonable belief must rest on facts and circumstances that can be articulated; "hunches" or intuitions are not sufficient. Reasonable belief may be based upon experience, training, and knowledge in intelligence or a related field, applied to the facts and circumstances at hand.

² Threats to Homeland Security include all threats or hazards, regardless of origin, that relate to critical infrastructure or key resources; a significant public safety, public health, or environmental impact; economic, political, and societal infrastructure; border security; proliferation or use of weapons of mass destruction; or other potential catastrophic events, including man-made and natural disasters.

1. REQUESTOR INFORMATION

- a. This section describes the person requesting the information. Annotate the individual that SPS can contact when a response is received from the action agency.
- b. This section describes the entity submitting the request. List the Agency, Office, and, if applicable, branch requesting the information.

2. REQUEST DESCRIPTION

- a. This section describes what is being requested. A detailed description of the precise information requested must be provided. This will ensure your request is answered as accurately as possible by the organization most capable of responding. Assume that the responding organization is unfamiliar with the nature and scope when detailing the request. If your request is for imagery please include dates and coordinates (available from Google Earth) or at a minimum, dates and place names, with the request.
- b. This section describes the desired response date and the date in which the information is no longer of value. It is important to note that DHS does not have tasking authority with outside organizations or DHS Components to respond to a request. Requests involving multiple agencies will require additional coordination time. The minimum processing time for requests to Intelligence Community members is typically 15 to 20 working days.
- c. This section annotates additional justification for requests with a suspense date of one business day. It is important to note that requests processed by the Intelligence Community within 2 to 4 hours require justification involving an imminent and identifiable threat. Requests processed by the Intelligence Community within 8 to 24 hours require a justification with critical actionable information.

3. INTELLIGENCE AND LAW ENFORCEMENT INFORMATION REQUESTS

- a. Select YES from the dropdown menu if the request contains USPER information. This information is required to ensure the request is properly handled and stored in accordance with Executive Order 12333.
- b. Select YES from the dropdown menu if the request contains ~~LES~~ information. This information is required as ~~LES~~ information requires a request to the originator prior to additional dissemination.
- c. This section describes the proposed use of the requested information as well as why the information is of value to the intended recipient(s). When detailing the proposed use, it is important to be as specific as possible when identifying the intended recipients of the information. If possible; list the division(s), branch(s), or individual(s) intended to receive the information. This is extremely important when releasing ~~UNCLASSIFIED/LES/SBU/FOUO~~ information, especially if the possibility exists that the information may be released to the general public.
- d. This section identifies the actions taken by the requester prior to submitting a request for information. Requestors are responsible for determining whether the request can be supported or completed at their level prior to submitting a request to query DHS systems, databases, and programs. The identification of prior research and database queries (to include database searches, analytical exchanges, message searches, and local outreach efforts) is crucial to prevent a duplication of effort. If circumstances limit access to DHS systems or databases, please annotate this here. For IC members, please state the larger Intelligence Problem being researched. If applicable, provide the originator, the reference number, and subject of the source document(s) related to this request.
- e. This section describes the justification of the request. Outside organizations prioritize requests based in the justification provided. In order to enable requirements and collection managers to develop a detailed response plan, requestors must clearly state the context associated with the request. Taking the time and effort to explain the context not only enables requirements and collection managers to understand the "larger picture," but it also ensures all possible resources are considered.
- f. This section will determine what information can be released by the requested organization. The ability of an organization to release information at a specific classification level is contingent upon the sources and methods used to gather the requested information.
- g. This section will determine if the information can be provided at a classification (to include caveats) that is useful to the requester. If an organization cannot downgrade the requested information to this level, the requester will receive a negative response.

4. DECLASSIFICATION/DOWNGRADE/TEARLINE/ADDITIONAL DISSEMINATION REQUESTS

* The below sections are only applicable to requests for downgrading the original classification or control marking(s) of a document.

- a. This section identifies the document to be downgraded. Provide all available identifying information of the report. Include, if available, the originator, the reference number, and subject of the document to be downgraded. When submitting a downgrade/tearline request, it is important to distinguish raw intelligence (such as an IIR or HIR) from a finished intelligence product (such as an intelligence assessment or intelligence summary), especially if the request is to have a source document (i.e. IIR) within a finished intelligence product downgraded. All downgrade/tearline requests will be forwarded to the producing agency, where a decision will be made as to whether the information can be downgraded.
- b. Identify how the information or intelligence product was obtained. Given the proliferation of information sharing systems, organizations responding to a downgrade/tearline request must be able to access the document in its original location.
- c. To prevent unnecessary delays, provide a summary of the information extracted from the original source document. Requests to have entire documents or products declassified are much less likely to be approved and will take significantly longer to process than a specific request for a line or paragraph. Mark the paragraphs with the requested classification and control marking.

All,

We have received a number of questions and requests for information regarding Occupy Wall Street from a number of component partners and intelligence officers. Recognizing that this is a first amendment-protected activity, we have recommended (on an ad hoc basis when we received requests) that our Intelligence Officers refer inquiries to Fusion Centers and avoid the topic altogether. That being said, given the number of requests that have appeared, we would like to equip the field with formal guidance as they will likely continue to receive requests like this from Fusion Center partners. We would greatly appreciate formal guidance from CRCL and/or Privacy (whatever you all would prefer to do) sooner rather than later to make sure the all in the field are acting in accordance with CRCL and Privacy policies. Thank you for your help!

Also, if you could, please cc SL Support on the response as they are the intake point for requests and it would be helpful for them to have this on hand to provide in case someone misses our e-mail.

A federal partner has submitted a RFI on any DHS products identifying and/or describing criminal activities and/or potential civil disobedience associated with the Occupy Wall Street protests nationwide, if any.

How many arrests have been made, type and number of weapons confiscated, communication used to plan these crimes, etc.

The response is requested at the ~~U//LES~~ level by Friday 21, 2011.

I contacted the POC for the meeting, but she suggested I contact you directly. I have not received the documents intended for discussion today. Were they sent out on C-LAN. I commented on an earlier draft of the CONOPS, but without the final draft in hand it is difficult to evaluate the final draft CONOPS and other documents.

I have replaced Ken Hunt as representing Mary Ellen or this and future IIR Advisory Group meetings.

Scott – thank you for taking the time to provide us such positive feedback on your interactions with (b) (6). Also, we truly appreciate your efforts to coordinate solutions with the SLPO so we can jointly keep our Regional Directors and Intelligence Officers informed on appropriate actions during sensitive situations. This example of coordination and collaboration in a timely manner between our offices and the field is a positive if we are asked how we handled the “Occupy” scenarios. Thanks for your partnership and the positive feedback on (b) (6) exemplary performance.

(b) (6):

I would like to commend to you the work of (b) (6) in coordinating and expediting intelligence products.

I have been responsible for the Privacy Office’s intelligence review activities for almost a year now, so I have had a little bit of time to work with different I&A staff in the oversight and clearance process. During this time I often noted how smoothly the process worked with (b) (6) involvement. (b) (6) is quick to follow-up and (most importantly) follow-through with Privacy’s comments and requests, coordinating solutions with the various participants in the process.

Most recently, (b) (6) brought to Privacy and CRCL’s attention some incoming requests for information regarding the ongoing Occupy Wall Street-type protests. She recognized the potential hazards and brought the requests to our attention at a very early stage. Upon (b) (6) request, Privacy and CRCL quickly drafted and coordinated guidance which was apparently disseminated shortly thereafter. As a result of the guidance, other components have reached out to Privacy and CRCL to better understand upon what to report concerning the protests.

I believe this was an excellent example of a coordinated effort by the offices involved to identify a potential problem, and takes steps to keep the problem from developing. I understand we have already received some FOIA requests regarding our possible reporting of the “Occupy...” protests. I think should the FOIA experts find it appropriate to release information about the manner in which this issue was managed within DHS, it could only be perceived as a positive by those in the public who closely observe the Department..

PRIV and CRCL supports the position that the Occupy Wall Street-type protesters mostly are engaged protected activity. We would also be loath to pass requests for more information on the protests along to the appropriate fusion centers without strong guidance that the vast majority of activities occurring as part of these protests is protected. To do otherwise might give the appearance that DHS is attempting to circumvent existing restrictions, policies, and laws.

To a large degree, these protests are no different from any other protests/events from civil liberties, civil rights and privacy perspectives. The issue is not the assembly of the groups nor the message of the participants, it is only (as far as DHS is concerned) illegal or suspicious behavior related to a DHS mission that occurs during the protests. A possible exception would be reports on the environment created at the protests sites that would endanger public health and safety.

So there are certainly some circumstances that may allow limited reporting on behavior that is coincident and collocated with "Occupy Wall Street" like protests. Persons demonstrating illegal or suspicious behavior and attempting to use the protests to obscure their activity could be reported, as long as there is no attempt to link the suspicious/illegal behavior to first amendment protected activity. Indeed, the normal CRCL and PRIV guidance used for HIRs and products would apply, as it is only the behavior which is being addressed.

It would be helpful to see some of the RFIs received from the field to get a better idea of exactly what type of information is being requested, if we were to consider issuing more formal guidance.

We hope this short and quick response will be helpful, but if the desire for formal guidance still exists, we would be happy to start the drafting process. Inevitably, drafting formal guidance would require a bit more time to gain the necessary clearances.

Scott, this looks great. Thank you for putting this well-written response together. We fully support this position. I've added a few extra nuggets for your consideration. I've used bold and underline to annotate the proposed changes. If you agree with this, please feel free to send forward. I've added my signature block to show my agreement.

PRIV and CRCL supports the position that the Occupy Wall Street-type protesters mostly are engaged constitutionally protected activity. We maintain our longstanding position that DHS should not report on activities when the basis for reporting is political speech. We would also be loath to pass DHS requests for more information on the protests along to the appropriate fusion centers without strong guidance that the vast majority of activities occurring as part of these protests is protected. To do otherwise might give the appearance that DHS is attempting to circumvent existing restrictions, policies, and laws.

To a large degree, these protests are no different from any other protests/events from civil liberties, civil rights and privacy perspectives. The issue is not the assembly of the groups nor the message of the participants, it is only (as far as DHS is concerned) illegal or suspicious behavior related to a DHS mission that occurs during the protests. A possible exception would be reports on the environment created at the protests sites that would endanger public health and safety, where the health and safety concern relates to the DHS mission.

So there are certainly some circumstances that may allow limited reporting on behavior that is coincident and collocated with "Occupy Wall Street" like protests. Scott,

Many thanks for the thoughtful and detailed guidance. We appreciate you taking the time to present Privacy's perspective on the myriad possibilities and outcomes posed by RFIs relating to this topic.

SL Support,

Would you mind sending them a compilation of the requests you have received regarding this topic? If that isn't possible I can cull through what has come in from our various IOs when I get back on Monday. Per Scott, I believe that context would be helpful for both Privacy and CRCL colleagues alike as I imagine we will continue to receive inquiries.

We would greatly appreciate formal guidance from CRCL and/or Privacy (whatever you all would prefer to do) sooner rather than later to make sure the all in the field are acting in accordance with CRCL and Privacy policies. Thank you for your help!

Also, if you could, please cc SL Support on the response as they are the intake point for requests and it would be helpful for them to have this on hand to provide in case someone misses our e-mail.

Privacy/CRCL,

Attached is the only Occupy Wall Street related RFI that the I&A Support Branch has received. It came in yesterday from (b) (6), DHS I&A Intelligence Officer in Louisiana. Our actions are documented on section 5 of the attached Support Request Form. We spoke to the (b) (6) and closed out the request. He asked us to pass along the following questions that ATF submitted to the Fusion Centers so you will have a better idea of what they are looking for.

The detailed concerns are listed below, as submitted by ATF:

- Has there been any violence perpetrated against Law Enforcement?
- Has Law Enforcement been mentioned as a potential target of protestors?
- Instances of violent rhetoric directed toward others?
- Have any conventional (firearms, knives) or unconventional (Molotov cocktails, bricks, stakes, chains) weapons been used and or confiscated from OWS protestors?
- If there have been weapons such as firearms or incendiary used or confiscated have the possessors been identified by Law Enforcement?

Please let me know if you have any questions.

Respectfully,

Absolutely. Thank you for the heads up.

It may be more beneficial to also provide the actual questions that ATF submitted to all FCs after we closed this request to get a true idea of what they needed.

My request was simply do we have any finished products, yes or no.

I just wanted to give you a heads up that per the below email, Privacy wants to get an idea of the types of RFIs that we're receiving related to Occupy Wall Street. Once they see the requests, they may be able to issue more formal guidance on how to proceed. Thus far, SL Support has only received your request, SLSR-0022-12. I will be passing this on to Privacy along with any future requests that we receive. Hopefully they'll be able to compile all the questions that are being asked and provide formal guidance to everyone in the field. Please let me know if you have any questions. A completed request form for SLSR-0022-12 is attached along with your original email.

Scott,

Many thanks for the thoughtful and detailed guidance. We appreciate you taking the time to present Privacy's perspective on the myriad possibilities and outcomes posed by RFIs relating to this topic.

SL Support,

Would you mind sending them a compilation of the requests you have received regarding this topic? If that isn't possible I can cull through what has come in from our various IOs when I get back on Monday. Per Scott, I believe that context would be helpful for both Privacy and CRCL colleagues alike as I imagine we will continue to receive inquiries.

Subject: RE: Guidance Requested: Occupy Wall Street

PRIV and CRCL supports the position that the Occupy Wall Street-type protesters mostly are engaged in constitutionally protected activity. We maintain our longstanding position that DHS should not report on activities when the basis for reporting is political speech. We would also be loath to pass DHS requests for more information on the protests along to the appropriate fusion centers without strong guidance that the vast majority of activities occurring as part of these protests is protected. To do otherwise might give the appearance that DHS is attempting to circumvent existing restrictions, policies, and laws.

To a large degree, these protests are no different from any other protests/events from civil liberties, civil rights and privacy perspectives. The issue is not the assembly of the groups nor the message of the participants, it is only (as far as DHS is concerned) illegal or suspicious behavior related to a DHS mission that occurs during the protests. A possible exception would be reports on the environment created at the protests sites that would endanger public health and safety, where the health and safety concern relates to a DHS mission.

So there are certainly some circumstances that may allow limited reporting on behavior that is coincident and collocated with Occupy Wall Street-like protests. Persons demonstrating illegal or suspicious behavior and attempting to use the protests to obscure their activity could be reported, as long as there is no attempt to link the suspicious/illegal behavior to first amendment protected activity. Indeed, the normal CRCL and PRIV guidance used for HIRs and intelligence products would apply, as it is only the behavior which is being addressed.

It would be helpful to see some of the RFIs received from the field to get a better idea of exactly what type of information is being requested, if we were to reconsider issuing more formal guidance.

We hope this short and quick response will be helpful, but if the desire for formal guidance still exists, we would be happy to start the drafting process. Undoubtedly, drafting formal guidance would require a bit more time to gain the necessary clearances.

All,

We have received a number of questions and requests for information regarding Occupy Wall Street from a number of component partners and intelligence officers. Recognizing that this is a first amendment-protected activity, we have recommended (on an ad hoc basis when we received requests) that our Intelligence Officers refer inquiries to Fusion Centers and avoid the topic altogether. That being said, given the number of requests that have appeared, we would like to equip the field with formal guidance as they will likely continue to receive requests like this from Fusion Center partners. We would greatly appreciate formal guidance from CRCL and/or Privacy (whatever you all would prefer to do) sooner rather than later to make sure the all in the field are acting in accordance with CRCL and Privacy policies. Thank you for your help!

CASE SUMMARY

On 11/02/11, one hundred (100) individuals associated with "Occupy Wall Street" demonstrated at a FPOTUS George W Bush site in New York City. The demonstrators were peaceful and protested corporate interests in US government. It should be noted, demonstrators spread word of FPOTUS Bush's presence at the site via Twitter. The demonstration concluded later the same day without incident. There was some media attention to the protest and the use of Twitter by demonstrators.

CASE SUMMARY

On 09/17/11, the NY Police Department reported 200 members of the groups Adbusters, Culture Jammers, and Anonymous gathered at the Wall Street Bull Statue to protest US economic practices and to "Occupy Wall Street." The groups used various internet social media sites to organize this "Day of Rage," comparing their cause to protests in countries such as Egypt and Greece. Several open source media outlets reported between 700-1000 individuals participated in the demonstration. According to NYPD, no arrests occurred. The moved to Zucotti Park in lower Manhattan as part of the protest and the demonstrators planned to remain until their goals were accomplished.

On 09/19/11, 500 people protestors marched near Wall Street to protest capitalism, government corruption, and the influence of U.S. money on U.S. politics. Several people wore masks. The demonstration was on-going.

On 09/20/11, NYPD advised they arrested 7 protestors at Zuccotti Park for disorderly conduct and failure to have a sound amplification permit.

On 9/21/11, 100 members of the group marched out of Zucotti Park, through lower Manhattan, and back to the park. The purpose of the march was to stop the execution of Troy Davis in the state of Georgia. Three people were arrested for disorderly conduct.

On 09/24/11, 90 people associated with the Occupy Wall Street demonstration were arrested by the NYPD.

As of 09/26/11, the demonstration continued in Zucotti Park and the surrounding Wall Street area. No protectee movements were effected.

November 2011 this record was subject of FOIA request.

Matt,

Since these protests are lawfully protected First Amendment activities, we are treating all "Occupy" demonstrations as peaceful. We are working with GSA and each city government to ensure that all parties concerned are safe and secure. When a protest area on Federal property is deemed unsanitary or unsafe by GSA or a city, we work with those officials to develop a plan to evacuate the participants in a safe manner.

We have held standard coordination calls and face-to-face meetings with our partners to ensure that the proper resources are available for operations such as street closures, etc. The only eviction FPS has been involved with was assisting the Portland Police Bureau at the federally-owned Terry Schunk Plaza where FPS arrested two people.

We're getting inquiries from CBS, AP, Daily Caller, Salon and others on an un-sourced Examiner.com piece that says DHS and FBI are collaborating with cities by providing tactics and information on removing Occupy protestors. A check of I&A and FPS shows that this type of outreach is not occurring in any wholesale manner. Please see below clarifying DHS/FPS' role in law enforcement around protest sites:

"We are treating all of these protests nationwide as peaceful demonstrations. If a protest area is located on Federal property and has been deemed unsanitary or unsafe by the General Services Administration (GSA) or city officials, and they make a decision to evacuate participants, the Federal Protective Service will work with those officials to develop a plan to ensure the security and safety of everyone involved."

If a protest area is located on Federal property and has been deemed unsanitary or unsafe by the General Services Administration (GSA) or city officials, and they make a decision to evacuate participants, the Federal Protective Service will work with those officials to develop a plan to ensure the security and safety of everyone involved."

ON BACKGROUND

FPS only has jurisdiction when a protest takes place on federal property, and in some cases, shares that jurisdiction with local authorities.

The GSA is the permitting authority for protests on federal property.

DHS is not actively coordinating with local law enforcement agencies and/or city governments concerning the evictions of Occupy encampments writ large.

Yes ma'am, on Tuesday, November 1, 2011 at approximately 4:30 a.m. FPS and Portland Police Bureau officers moved into Terry Shrunken Park in downtown Portland to evict a number of "Occupy Portland" protesters who had set up tents in the federal park. Approximately 12 tents had been set up and about 20 protesters were present. FPS personnel ordered the protesters to depart since overnight camping is not allowed in the park and about half of the people present complied and departed. 10 protesters refused to leave and were arrested for failure to comply with the lawful order of a Federal police officer.

As I thought, I&A scrupulously avoided any connection with the Occupy movement/protests/dismantlings. We cannot speak for any individual fusion center or other departmental component, but we issued no product to our customers and held no conf call with our field IOs on the subject.

An IP contractor apparently posted an uncleared Tripwire product to the website, but it was pulled down. A recipient of that product then had it posted to the DSAC website – which I'll forward separately – and DUS Scalici had it pulled down.

Hi there,

My name is Bigad Shaban and I am a correspondent with CBS News (national).

We'd like to request comment from the Department of Homeland Security concerning whether it, or any other federal agencies, offered any kind of assistance or advice to municipalities looking to dismantle their own Anti-Wallstreet "Occupy" protests.

Published reports note a relationship between the federal government and cities orchestrating the removal of "Occupy protestors" from makeshift camp sites.

Please check on the content of the referenced DHS product on Occupy Wall Street. This could be quite unfortunate. I thought IP had withdrawn this piece. We may need DSAC to immediately withdraw their e-mail and take it off DSAC's portal if it is posted there.

Dear DHS,

Reuters is doing a story about the coordinated clearing of Occupy Wall Street encampments across the country. Our question is, did the Department of Homeland Security and/or the FBI help mayors coordinate the clearing of the sites? How?

Any assistance would be greatly appreciated.

FROM CQ HOMELAND SECURITY

BEHIND THE LINES FOR WEDNESDAY, NOV. 16, 2011 — 3 P.M.

By David C. Morrison, Special to Congressional Quarterly

Extraterritoriality: Amid "deep unease" over U.K. anti-terror mojo, the United States might dispatch 500 FBI agents to safeguard American athletes at London Olympics . . . Today's access of angst, "It may be possible to hack into the engine-control systems of some Boeing 747s through the passenger-accessible entertainment system" . . . Another county heard from: Bill would give local sheriffs a say in how CBP agents operate on federal lands along northern border. These and other stories lead today's homeland security coverage.

Expressing "deep unease" that the U.K. has had to restrict the scope of anti-terror "stop and search" powers, U.S. officials plan to dispatch 500 FBI agents to safeguard American athletes at next summer's Olympic games, The Guardian's Nick Hopkins and Richard Norton-Taylor recount — while Guardian sports scribe Richard Williams accuses Washington securicrats of "viewing a piece of alien territory as some corner of a foreign field that is temporarily American, just because Americans happen to be there."

FEDS: Rep. Denny Rehberg, R-Mont., is working on a new amendment to a controversial border security bill, one that would give local sheriffs a say in how CBP agents operate on federal lands along the Canadian border, The Missoulian's Mike Dennison relates. As drones play a mounting role in border security, CBP received its second Predator B in Texas last month and will add its sixth overall on the Southwest border in Arizona by year's end, The Associated Press' Christopher Sherman spotlights — as Mark Hewitt marvels in The American Thinker: Is CBP's "cost of apprehending a single illegal alien" with a Predator surveillance UAV "really $32,000?"

DETENTION AND REMOVAL: DHS is poised to "start separating high-priority cases involving criminals it wants to deport from low-priority cases it will drop following a June directive [urging agents to] exercise discretion in deportation decisions," The Financial Times' Anjali Raval relates — while The New York Times' Julia Preston sees uneven application of that new policy leading "to vast confusion both in immigrant communities and among agents charged with carrying it out." Liberal groups including the ACLU are crying foul at what they say is the Obama administration's political gamesmanship over the deportation of illegal immigrants, The Daily Caller's Michael Volpe leads. "As Congress struggles to find ways to reduce the debt, something as wasteful and inhumane as the immigrant detention system merits careful scrutiny," Timothy J. Steigenga adjures in The Palm Beach Post.

STATE AND LOCAL: More doubt is being cast on a New York Post story alleging that Occupy Wall Street protesters drew graffiti on the new 9/11 memorial at Ground Zero, Salon says. The heads of law enforcement agencies in seven North Carolina counties "met recently at the Wilkesboro Civic Center to prepare for helping each other during situations requiring more security than normal," The Wilkes Journal-Patriot reports. While it may not have been fully apparent, a "sizable portion" of the Hawaii National Guard's 5,500 troops were mobilized for last weekend's APEC Summit, a spokesman tells The Honolulu Star-Advertiser. "Adding to its existing arsenal of high-tech, anti-terrorist gadgets," the Pasadena (Calif.) Police Department will spend $650,000 from DHS to equip more of its helicopter fleet with infrared cameras, the Star-News notes.

FOLLOW THE MONEY: The Arab-American head of a Dearborn, Mich., Muslim center, arrested on suspicion of being wanted for funneling money to Hezbollah, was later found to be the wrong man and released, Reuters reports. The Obama administration is quietly working to counter potential intel and security risks posed by foreign telecoms' expansion in the U.S. market, The Wall Street Journal relates. The head of the Transaction Reports and Analysis Centre warns that he will not hesitate to use sweeping new powers to crack down on those suspected of money laundering or terrorism financing, The Australian relates. As a means of financing, the terror-listed Kurdistan Workers' Party "has entered the ranks of the world's biggest drug cartels," Today's Zaman sees narcotics operations in recent years showing.

BUGS 'N BOMBS: Some 39 states are awaiting money to help rebuild disaster-damaged roads as the Federal Highway Administration racks up a backlog of more than $2 billion in requests, Stateline relates. Utility cybersecurity is in a state of near chaos," Computerworld hears a research report alerting. The Defense Science Board is calling on the U.S. military to improve intelligence-gathering related to climate change, which it says "has the potential for significant impacts" on U.S. security, USA Today tells. North Korea has made rapid progress on the construction of a new nuclear reactor, though it won't be running for two or three more years, The Washington Post reports. The mounting number of firearms seized at airport checkpoints, "to me, reflects a culture in which laws covering the possession of guns are becoming increasingly looser," a New York Times travel writer ruminates.

CLOSE AIR SUPPORT: "Travel for many from the Middle East has often been quite difficult, but following 9/11 and the Arab Spring, it seems to be worsening," a Kuwait Times feature on airport profiling leads — as The Economic Times hears former Indian prez Abdul Kalam yet again dismissing as a cause celebre his recent frisking by TSA security officials at JFK, his second such. "What is the difference between an artist and a terrorist when it comes to boarding a plane? Apparently, there is none," an intensively screened op-ed contributor leads in The Gainesville (Fla.) Sun. Of the 26 regional airports that operate regular commercial passenger flights in Australia's New South Wales, just four have screening equipment, The Sydney Sunday Telegraph tells — while The Sydney Morning Herald sees an oil rig worker fined $500 after joking at a Brisbane Airport checkpoint that he had a bomb strapped to his ankle.

TERROR TECH: "A plant pathologist's device could help DHS monitor for food terrorism with balloons attached to sensors that measure clouds of spores above fields and sniff for disease activity," International Business Times spotlights. In the "latest edition of the military's eternal quest for 'A Thingamajig that Solves All Terrorism,'" the Army wants a portable gadget that can remotely "detect American foes, liars and other delinquent characters with near-perfect accuracy" Danger Room reports. The Green Machine is also in the market for a paintball system that can detect the presence and type of different explosives in roadside IEDs, "a sort of like a litmus test for bombs," DR further relates — and check out Public Intelligence for a hitherto unaired text version of a 2008 FBI-DHS Joint Bulletin on "radio controlled model aircraft as possible IED platforms." The severity of burn injuries may be reduced with an iPhone app developed by a former U.K. serviceman, The Engineer informs.

CYBERIA: "What, exactly, is it that cyberterrorists are going to do? Engage in identity theft? Steal U.S. intellectual property? Those are somewhat worrisome, but where is the 'terror' part?" Watching the Watchers head-scratches. "While hackers have been around for as long as computers have, it is only in the last few years that the dangers of cyberwar have become more evident," a Public Service tutorial suggests. "With cyberwar posing more and more danger," the Pentagon's blue-sky research agency plans to put more funds into cyber-research, SPAMfighter relates. DHS "is playing a crucial role in enhancing cybersecurity . . . one of the biggest challenges to our homeland," Janet Napolitano spotlights in a Politico op-ed. A New Zealand ambulance service fell victim to a computer virus infection that disabled its automated response systems nationwide, Naked Security notes — as ITworld reports that "it appears, however unlikely it sounds, as if it may be possible to hack into the engine-control systems of some Boeing 747s through the passenger-accessible entertainment system."

COURTS AND RIGHTS: A former friend testified that he brought terror-charged Tarek Mehanna and two associates to Logan International in 2004 so they could travel to Yemen to train in a terrorist camp, The Boston Globe relates. Two U.S. airmen injured in a Kosovo Muslim's airport gun assault in Germany last March testified in Frankfurt on Monday at Arid Uka's trial, which resumes Dec. 5, Stars and Stripes relates. A decade past 9/11, counterterrorism remains Justice's highest priority, The Washington Times sees an I.G. report confirming. "Congress is under growing pressure from civil liberties groups to reopen the Patriot Act and remove provisions like sneak and peek warrants," Pittsburgh's WTAE 4 News notes — as a Reason review rumbles: "Patriot Act 'reform' is not the way; the thing is irreparable . . . Rather, the practice of nonspecific total surveillance must be abolished."

OVER THERE: "America will discover, as Israel did, that a one-way urge for [a pre-9/11 normal world] will lead to a more dangerous world," Mark Steyn states in Commentary — to which The Atlantic's Colin Friedersdorf counters: "In Steyn world, there is never any worry that powers accrued in the War on Terrorism will be turned against non-terrorists." Today and tomorrow, security experts from Sahelian countries will meet in Algiers to discuss anti-terrorism efforts in the region, The Christian Science Monitor mentions. China is all set to develop the historic town of Kashgar along its border with Pakistan into a "key financial and manufacturing hub" to counter terrorism in its restive Xinjiang province, The Times of India informs.

OPPORTUNITY KNOCKING: "A series of coordinated ICE raids have liberated hundreds of terrible jobs and homes for Americans," DHS officials tell News Mutiny. "Conducted over the past two weeks, the raids targeted illegal aliens where they live — in low-income housing tenements and encampments throughout California, Arizona, New Mexico, and Texas. An estimated 2,000 decrepit homes, tents and terrible, low-paying jobs previously occupied by the migrants have been made available for American citizens as a result of the campaign, authorities say. Michael Winter of Stockton, Calif., unemployed for more than 10 months, is thankful for his awful new job picking strawberries five times slower than his predecessors. 'Stooping over 10,000 times a day to hand pick 10,000 berries in the hot sun for half the money it would cost to rent an apartment for my family to sleep in isn't necessarily my dream job, but it definitely beats not having a job and living in a box in some canyon somewhere,' Winter said."

SUBJECT: US-CERT Leadership Awareness Notice: Anonymous Launches Revenge Attack against Oakland Police Department after Occupy Protest [INITIAL]

EXECUTIVE OVERVIEW:

The Anonymous hacktivist group has reportedly executed a distributed denial of service (DDoS) attack against the Oakland Police Department's website according to SC magazine.

According to SC Magazine, www.oaklandpolice.com was unavailable early Thursday. The site was available as of Thursday evening.

Johnna Watson a spokeswoman for the Oakland Police Department told CNET that the department was looking into the matter.

Anonymous originally announced the attack via Twitter and posted contact information, schedules, badge numbers, and additional information of Oakland police officers on Pastebin. "The time has come to retaliate against Oakland police via all non-violent means, beginning with 'doxing' of individual officers and particularly higher-ups involved in the department's conduct of late".

Anonymous' operation, dubbed "OpUprise," comes in response to Tuesday night's police action towards a demonstration organized to protest the clearing of an encampment where Occupy Oakland members had been staying. Hackers have also targeted bankers, former U.S. Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin, and an on duty New York police officer. They have also threatened to take down the Fox News website over its ongoing coverage of the protests.

DHS ROLE:

US-CERT has reached out to the FBI and MS-ISAC. MS-ISAC responded that all posts appear to contain publicly available information such as phone numbers, officer names, and badge numbers. MS-ISAC leadership will further review to determine the PII status of this information and whether PII notification is required.

INTERAGENCY / PRIVATE SECTOR ROLE:

US-CERT received notification from MS-ISAC that, as of this time, MS-ISAC has not concluded that any PII was posted to Pastebin.

Scott/Bob,

WSJ is asking if there has been any change in security or posture at the Federal Reserve in DC since the Occupy Wall Street protests, and for that matter, the Federal Reserve building in NYC. Anecdotaly, he says he knows that the car barriers have been raised up (the kind that come up out of the street on hydraulics), but given the Federal Reserves proximity to the State Department, it could be unrelated to the OWS protests.

Can you guys please check in with FPS?

Thanks,

Given the media coverage and the fact we put an NCCIC bulletin out on this, there's a chance we may get questions about the Occupy Wall Street protests.

I'm thinking we just make clear that using social media organize protests is well within constitutional rights; when it becomes our business if social media is used by hacktivist groups to plan cyber attacks. Greg, in particular, is this a question you have fielded before?

WHITE HOUSE PRESS SECRETARY JAY CARNEY HOLDS WHITE HOUSE REGULAR NEWS BRIEFING
 WHITE HOUSE REGULAR NEWS BRIEFING
 NOVEMBER 1, 2011

SPEAKER: WHITE HOUSE PRESS SECRETARY JAY CARNEY

[*] CARNEY: Good afternoon, ladies and gentlemen. Welcome to the White House. Thanks for being here for your daily briefing. I don't have any announcements to make at the top, so I'll go straight to your questions.

QUESTION: Thank you. I'd like to talk about the Occupy movements. In Portland last night federal security officers joined with Portland police in clearing out and arresting campers who were staying overnight in a federal plaza.

What is the federal policy on dealing with these protesters?

CARNEY: Well, this is, I think, a unique circumstance, the first of its kind. I would -- I would refer to DHS in this case, because it was -- involved, I think, the Federal Protective Service, as well as local Portland authorities.

You know, our broad posture here is that we understand the frustrations that have been expressed by many Americans in different cities across the country about, broadly speaking, the economy, and also about the need for Wall Street to, you know, work by the same rules that Main Street works by.

It's also the case, as I said in answer to questions about situations in other cities, that it -- you know, everyone needs to behave, handle themselves in a lawful way. And -- but I don't have anything specific about that particular incident.

QUESTION: I just didn't know if that was usual for them to be involved.

CARNEY: Well, I think the case -- the issue here was that it was federal property. So it, just as, you know, something happens in one of the federal parks here might involve the National Park Service or something like that. So I think that was the -- the reason in this case.

Chris,

Heads up – an organization is planning to protest at the State Department’s conference tomorrow at the Ronald Reagan Building on the Keystone pipeline to Canada -- <http://www.wearepowershift.org/blogs/climate-movement-stands-occupywallst-tonight-well-occupystatedept> -- they’re trying to model the Occupy Wall Street group.

It looks like some are going to spend the night at the RRB. They have a permit to stay at Freedom Plaza across the street, but people are not allowed to sleep in the RRB or on the sidewalk out front (though the building is open 24 hours, and so they can go inside if they go through security and can stay as long as they remain peaceful). If people attempt to set up camp to sleep in the building, FPS will ask them to leave and if they refuse, they will be arrested (by either FPS or DC Police Department, whoever responds first).

Below is a draft statement to have at the ready, if that happens.

Let me know if this works, and if you have any questions.

Hacker group Anonymous draws increased scrutiny from feds

By: PAUL ELIAS | 09/11/11 2:12 PM
Associated Press

Anonymous is not so anonymous anymore. The computer hackers, chat room denizens and young people who comprise the loosely affiliated Internet collective have increasingly turned to questionable tactics, drawing the attention of the FBI, the Department of Homeland Security and other federal investigators. What was once a small group of pranksters has become a potential national security threat, federal officials say. The FBI has carried out more than 75 raids and arrested 16 people this year in connection with illegal hacking jobs claimed by Anonymous.

Since June, the Department of Homeland Security has issued three "bulletins" warning cyber-security professionals of hacking successes and future threats by Anonymous and related groups, including a call to physically occupy Manhattan's Wall Street on Sept. 17 in protest of various U.S. government policies.

San Francisco police arrested more than 40 protesters last month during a rowdy demonstration organized by Anonymous that disrupted the evening commute. The group called for the demonstration after the Bay Area Rapid Transit system shut off its cell service in San Francisco stations to quell a planned protest over police shooting on a subway platform.

"Anonymous' activities increased throughout 2011 with a number of high-profile attacks targeting both public and private sector entities," one of the bulletins issued last month said.

Some members of the group have also called for shutting down Facebook in November over privacy issues, although other Anonymous followers are disavowing such an attack - underscoring just how loosely organized the group is and how problematic it is to police.

"Anonymous insist they have no centralized operational leadership, which has been a significant hurdle for government and law enforcement entities attempting to curb their actions," an Aug. 1 Homeland Security bulletin noted. "With that being said, we assess with high confidence that Anonymous and associated groups will continue to exploit vulnerable publicly available Web servers, websites, computer networks, and other digital information mediums for the foreseeable future."

Followers posting to Twitter and chatting in Internet Relay Channels insist there are no defined leaders of Anonymous and that it's more of a philosophy than a formal club, though a small group of members do the most organizing online.

"Anonymous is not a group, it does not have leaders, people can do ANYTHING under the flag of their country," wrote one of the more vocal members who asked not to be identified.

"Anything can be a threat to National Security, really," the member said in an email interview. "Any hacker group can be."

The member said that the group as a whole wasn't a national security threat, but conceded some individuals acting as Anonymous may be considered dangerous.

DHS' latest bulletin, issued Sept. 3, warned the group has been using social media networks to urge followers working in the financial industry to sabotage their employers' computer systems.

The DHS warning comes on the heels of several Anonymous-led protests of the Bay Area's transit agency that led to FBI raids of 35 homes and dozens of arrests, as well as to the indictment of 14 followers in July on felony computer hacking charges in connection with a coordinated "denial of service attack" against Paypal's website last year.

Security officials said the "DDoS" attacks occur when a website is overwhelmed by malicious messages carried out by thousands of followers, usually with easily downloadable software.

"Anonymous has shown through recently reported incidents that it has members who have relatively more advanced technical capabilities who can also marshal large numbers of willing, but less technical, participants for DDoS activities," the August DHS bulletin said.

Anonymous orchestrated the crashing of Paypal late last year after the online financial service suspended Wikileaks' account after the website published confidential diplomatic cables and other sensitive U.S. government intelligence. The group also targeted Visa, Mastercard and others for the same reason and has carried out several other hacks during the year. Last month, for example, the group claimed responsibility for hacking a website belonging to the Bay Area Rapid Transit agency and releasing personal information of 2,000 passengers. "Anonymous is incredibly active," said Josh Shaul, chief technology officer of Application Security, Inc., a New York-based provider of database security software. It's rare to have a hacking group willing to work outside of the shadows. These guys are quite brazen."

Anonymous emerged in 2003 from an Internet chat channel where members organized random Web incidents for their own amusement. By 2008, the prankster nature of Anonymous morphed into "hacktivism," where members sabotaged websites and leaked confidential information for political purposes.

Investigators suspect a splinter Anonymous group known as LulzSec was responsible for a June 15 denial of service attack on the CIA's public website.

This summer, Anonymous claimed credit for hacking into a Booz Allen Hamilton website and leaking email addresses of 90,000 U.S. military personnel and hacking a Monsanto Co. website and releasing personal data of 2,500 employees.

Until July, law enforcement officials around the world had arrested just a handful of suspected hackers thought to be affiliated with Anonymous. But on July 19, the FBI fanned out across the United States and raided more than 35 homes, seizing dozens of computers and arrested 16 on charges that they participated in the Paypal attack. In response, Anonymous said it hacked a website on Sept. 1 belonging to police chiefs in Texas. The group posted personal information such as emails about internal investigations before the site was shut down.

FBI investigators in court filings said that the raids and arrests were made from a list of 1,000 computer users that Paypal cyber-security workers identified as the most active attackers. The fourteen appearing in San Jose federal court have pleaded not guilty and were released on bail after promising not to access Twitter, Facebook and other social media sites. The DHS defines script kiddies as: "Unskilled individuals who use scripts or programs developed by others to attack computer systems and networks and deface w

Most of the defendants were younger than 30. Security experts and the Department of Homeland Security say most of Anonymous followers are so-called "script kiddies," young people who carry out the attacks and who are
"less skilled hackers" than the vocal group members who call for the protests and attacks.

As discussed, I'm providing the bulletin under 'as obtained' conditions. You can use the below explanation on background from a DHS official.

Thanks for your patience. - Chris

ON BACKGROUND (DHS official)

DHS' National Cybersecurity and Communications Integration Center (NCCIC) routinely shares actionable cybersecurity information with federal, state, local and private sector partners. This September 2 bulletin is an example of that collaboration and open communication.

This NCCIC bulletin is derived from unclassified, open-source information, and is intended to provide a more comprehensive understanding of recent cyber activity. It is also intended to give perspective on this activity to those in our critical infrastructure community, and provide recommendations on how to protect against and, if needed, respond to incidents.

Matt,

Since these protests are lawfully protected First Amendment activities, we are treating all "Occupy" demonstrations as peaceful. We are working with GSA and each city government to ensure that all parties concerned are safe and secure. When a protest area on Federal property is deemed unsanitary or unsafe by GSA or a city, we work with those officials to develop a plan to evacuate the participants in a safe manner.

We have held standard coordination calls and face-to-face meetings with our partners to ensure that the proper resources are available for operations such as street closures, etc. The only eviction FPS has been involved with was assisting the Portland Police Bureau at the federally-owned Terry Schunk Plaza where FPS arrested two people.

Hi there,

My name is Bigad Shaban and I am a correspondent with CBS News (national).

We'd like to request comment from the Department of Homeland Security concerning whether it, or any other federal agencies, offered any kind of assistance or advice to municipalities looking to dismantle their own Anti-Wallstreet "Occupy" protests.

Published reports note a relationship between the federal government and cities orchestrating the removal of "Occupy protestors" from makeshift camp sites.

We're getting inquiries from CBS, AP, Daily Caller, Salon and others on an un-sourced Examiner.com piece that says DHS and FBI are collaborating with cities by providing tactics and information on removing Occupy protestors. A check of I&A and FPS shows that this type of outreach is not occurring in any wholesale manner. Please see below clarifying DHS/FPS' role in law enforcement around protest sites:

"We are treating all of these protests nationwide as peaceful demonstrations. If a protest area is located on Federal property and has been deemed unsanitary or unsafe by the General Services Administration (GSA) or city officials, and they make a decision to evacuate participants, the Federal Protective Service will work with those officials to develop a plan to ensure the security and safety of everyone involved."

ON BACKGROUND

- FPS only has jurisdiction when a protest takes place on federal property, and in some cases, shares that jurisdiction with local authorities.

12/5/2011

The GSA is the permitting authority for protests on federal property.

- DHS is not actively coordinating with local law enforcement agencies and/or city governments concerning the evictions of Occupy encampments writ large.
- FPS has only been involved in one instance in removing protestors, in Portland, OR. FPS was assisting the Portland Police Bureau at the federally-owned Terry Schruck Plaza where FPS arrested several people.

Yes ma'am, on Tuesday, November 1, 2011 at approximately 4:30 a.m. FPS and Portland Police Bureau officers moved into Terry Shrunken Park in downtown Portland to evict a number of "Occupy Portland" protesters who had set up tents in the federal park. Approximately 12 tents had been set up and about 20 protesters were present. FPS personnel ordered the protesters to depart since overnight camping is not allowed in the park and about half of the people present complied and departed. 10 protesters refused to leave and were arrested for failure to comply with the lawful order of a Federal police officer.

As I thought, I&A scrupulously avoided any connection with the Occupy movement/protests/dismantlings. We cannot speak for any individual fusion center or other departmental component, but we issued no product to our customers and held no conf call with our field IOs on the subject.

An IP contractor apparently posted an uncleared Tripwire product to the website, but it was pulled down. A recipient of that product then had it posted to the DSAC website – which I'll forward separately – and DUS Scalici had it pulled down.

Hi there,

My name is Bigad Shaban and I am a correspondent with CBS News (national).

We'd like to request comment from the Department of Homeland Security concerning whether it, or any other federal agencies, offered any kind of assistance or advice to municipalities looking to dismantle their own Anti-Wallstreet "Occupy" protests.

Published reports note a relationship between the federal government and cities orchestrating the removal of "Occupy protestors" from makeshift camp sites.

Please check on the content of the referenced DHS product on Occupy Wall Street. This could be quite unfortunate. I thought IP had withdrawn this piece. We may need DSAC to immediately withdraw their e-mail and take it off DSAC's portal if it is posted there.

Dear DHS,

Reuters is doing a story about the coordinated clearing of Occupy Wall Street encampments across the country. Our question is, did the Department of Homeland Security and/or the FBI help mayors coordinate the clearing of the sites? How?

Any assistance would be greatly appreciated.

FROM CQ HOMELAND SECURITY

BEHIND THE LINES FOR WEDNESDAY, NOV 16, 2011 — 3 P.M.

By David C. Morrison, Special to Congressional Quarterly

Extraterritoriality: Amid "deep unease" over U.K. anti-terror mojo, the United States might dispatch 500 FBI agents to safeguard American athletes at London Olympics . . . Today's access of angst: "It may be possible to hack into the engine-control systems of some Boeing 747s through the passenger-accessible entertainment system" . . . Another county heard from: Bill would give local sheriffs a say in how CBP agents operate on federal lands along northern border. These and other stories lead today's homeland security coverage.

Expressing "deep unease" that the U.K. has had to restrict the scope of anti-terror "stop and search" powers, U.S. officials plan to dispatch 500 FBI agents to safeguard American athletes at next summer's Olympic games, The Guardian's Nick Hopkins and Richard Norton-Taylor recount — while Guardian sports scribe Richard Williams accuses Washington securicrats of "viewing a piece of alien territory as some corner of a foreign field that is temporarily American, just because Americans happen to be there."

FEDS: Rep. Denny Rehberg, R-Mont., is working on a new amendment to a controversial border security bill, one that would give local sheriffs a say in how CBP agents operate on federal lands along the Canadian border, The Missoulian's Mike Dennison relates. As drones play a mounting role in border security, CBP received its second Predator B in Texas last month and will add its sixth overall on the Southwest border in Arizona by year's end, The Associated Press' Christopher Sherman spotlights — as Mark Hewitt marvels in The American Thinker: Is CBP's "cost of apprehending a single illegal alien" with a Predator surveillance UAV "really $32,000?"

DETENTION AND REMOVAL: DHS is poised to "start separating high-priority cases involving criminals it wants to deport from low-priority cases it will drop following a June directive [urging agents to] exercise discretion in deportation decisions," The Financial Times' Anjli Raval relates — while The New York Times' Julia Preston sees uneven application of that new policy leading "to vast confusion both in immigrant communities and among agents charged with carrying it out." Liberal groups including the ACLU are crying foul at what they say is the Obama administration's political gamesmanship over the deportation of illegal immigrants, The Daily Caller's Michael Volpe leads. "As Congress struggles to find ways to reduce the debt, something as wasteful and inhumane as the immigrant detention system merits careful scrutiny," Timothy J. Steigenga adjures in The Palm Beach Post.

STATE AND LOCAL: More doubt is being cast on a New York Post story alleging that Occupy Wall Street protesters drew graffiti on the new 9/11 memorial at Ground Zero, Salon says. The heads of law enforcement agencies in seven North Carolina counties "met recently at the Wilkesboro Civic Center to prepare for helping each other during situations requiring more security than normal," The Wilkes Journal-Patriot reports. While it may not have been fully apparent, a "sizable portion" of the Hawaii National Guard's 5,500 troops were mobilized for last weekend's APEC Summit, a spokesman tells The Honolulu Star-Advertiser. "Adding to its existing arsenal of high-tech, anti-terrorist gadgets," the Pasadena (Calif.) Police Department will spend $650,000 from DHS to equip more of its helicopter fleet with infrared cameras, the Star-News notes.

FOLLOW THE MONEY: The Arab-American head of a Dearborn, Mich., Muslim center, arrested on suspicion of being wanted for funneling money to Hezbollah, was later found to be the wrong man and released, Reuters reports. The Obama administration is quietly working to counter potential intel and security risks posed by foreign telecoms' expansion in the U.S. market, The Wall Street Journal relates. The head of the Transaction Reports and Analysis Centre warns that he will not hesitate to use sweeping new powers to crack down on those suspected of money laundering or terrorism financing, The Australian relates. As a means of financing, the terror-listed Kurdistan Workers' Party "has entered the ranks of the world's biggest drug cartels," Today's Zaman sees narcotics operations in recent years showing.

BUGS 'N BOMBS: Some 39 states are awaiting money to help rebuild disaster-damaged roads as the Federal Highway Administration racks up a backlog of more than $2 billion in requests, Stateline relates. Utility cybersecurity is in a state of near chaos," Computerworld hears a research report alerting. The Defense Science Board is calling on the U.S. military to improve intelligence-gathering related to climate change, which it says "has the potential for significant impacts" on U.S. security, USA Today tells. North Korea has made rapid progress on the construction of a new nuclear reactor, though it won't be running for two or three more years, The Washington Post reports. The mounting number of firearms seized at airport checkpoints, "to me, reflects a culture in which laws covering the possession of guns are becoming increasingly looser," a New York Times travel writer ruminates.

CLOSE AIR SUPPORT: "Travel for many from the Middle East has often been quite difficult, but following 9/11 and the Arab Spring, it seems to be worsening," a Kuwait Times feature on airport profiling leads — as The Economic Times hears former Indian prez Abdul Kalam yet again dismissing as a cause celebre his recent frisking by TSA security officials at JFK, his second such. "What is the difference between an artist and a terrorist when it comes to boarding a plane? Apparently, there is none," an intensively screened op-ed contributor leads in The Gainesville (Fla.) Sun. Of the 26 regional airports that operate regular commercial passenger flights in Australia's New South Wales, just four have screening equipment, The Sydney Sunday Telegraph tells — while The Sydney Morning Herald sees an oil rig worker fined $500 after joking at a Brisbane Airport checkpoint that he had a bomb strapped to his ankle.

TERROR TECH: "A plant pathologist's device could help DHS monitor for food terrorism with balloons attached to sensors that measure clouds of spores above fields and sniff for disease activity," International Business Times spotlights. In the "latest edition of the military's eternal quest for 'A Thingamajig that Solves All Terrorism,'" the Army wants a portable gadget that can remotely "detect American foes, liars and other delinquent characters with near-perfect accuracy" Danger Room reports. The Green Machine is also in the market for a paintball system that can detect the presence and type of different explosives in roadside IEDs, "a sort of like a litmus test for bombs," DR further relates — and check out Public Intelligence for a hitherto unaired text version of a 2008 FBI-DHS Joint Bulletin on "radio controlled model aircraft as possible IED platforms." The severity of burn injuries may be reduced with an iPhone app developed by a former U.K. serviceman, The Engineer informs.

CYBERIA: "What, exactly, is it that cyberterrorists are going to do? Engage in identity theft? Steal U.S. intellectual property? Those are somewhat worrisome, but where is the 'terror' part?" Watching the Watchers head-scratches. "While hackers have been around for as long as computers have, it is only in the last few years that the dangers of cyberwar have become more evident," a Public Service tutorial suggests. "With cyberwar posing more and more danger," the Pentagon's blue-sky research agency plans to put more funds into cyber-research, SPAMfighter relates. DHS "is playing a crucial role in enhancing cybersecurity . . . one of the biggest challenges to our homeland," Janet Napolitano spotlights in a Politico op-ed. A New Zealand ambulance service fell victim to a computer virus infection that disabled its automated response systems nationwide, Naked Security notes — as ITworld reports that "it appears, however unlikely it sounds, as if it may be possible to hack into the engine-control systems of some Boeing 747s through the passenger-accessible entertainment system."

COURTS AND RIGHTS: A former friend testified that he brought terror-charged Tarek Mehanna and two associates to Logan International in 2004 so they could travel to Yemen to train in a terrorist camp, The Boston Globe relates. Two U.S. airmen injured in a Kosovo Muslim's airport gun assault in Germany last March testified in Frankfurt on Monday at Arid Uka's trial, which resumes Dec. 5, Stars and Stripes relates. A decade past 9/11, counterterrorism remains Justice's highest priority, The Washington Times sees an I.G. report confirming. "Congress is under growing pressure from civil liberties groups to reopen the Patriot Act and remove provisions like sneak and peek warrants," Pittsburgh's WTAE 4 News notes — as a Reason review rumbles: "Patriot Act 'reform' is not the way; the thing is irreparable . . . Rather, the practice of nonspecific total surveillance must be abolished."

OVER THERE: "America will discover, as Israel did, that a one-way urge for [a pre-9/11 normal world] will lead to a more dangerous world," Mark Steyn states in Commentary — to which The Atlantic's Colin Friedersdorf counters: "In Steyn world, there is never any worry that powers accrued in the War on Terrorism will be turned against non-terrorists." Today and tomorrow, security experts from Sahelian countries will meet in Algiers to discuss anti-terrorism efforts in the region, The Christian Science Monitor mentions. China is all set to develop the historic town of Kashgar along its border with Pakistan into a "key financial and manufacturing hub" to counter terrorism in its restive Xinjiang province, The Times of India informs.

OPPORTUNITY KNOCKING: "A series of coordinated ICE raids have liberated hundreds of terrible jobs and homes for Americans," DHS officials tell News Mutiny. "Conducted over the past two weeks, the raids targeted illegal aliens where they live — in low-income housing tenements and encampments throughout California, Arizona, New Mexico, and Texas. An estimated 2,000 decrepit homes, tents and terrible, low-paying jobs previously occupied by the migrants have been made available for American citizens as a result of the campaign, authorities say. Michael Winter of Stockton, Calif., unemployed for more than 10 months, is thankful for his awful new job picking strawberries five times slower than his predecessors. 'Stooping over 10,000 times a day to hand pick 10,000 berries in the hot sun for half the money it would cost to rent an apartment for my family to sleep in isn't necessarily my dream job, but it definitely beats not having a job and living in a box in some canyon somewhere,' Winter said."

SUBJECT: US-CERT Leadership Awareness Notice: Anonymous Launches Revenge Attack against Oakland Police Department after Occupy Protest [INITIAL]

EXECUTIVE OVERVIEW:

The Anonymous hacktivist group has reportedly executed a distributed denial of service (DDoS) attack against the Oakland Police Department's website according to SC magazine.

According to SC Magazine, www.oaklandpolice.com was unavailable early Thursday. The site was available as of Thursday evening.

Johnna Watson a spokeswoman for the Oakland Police Department told CNET that the department was looking into the matter.

Anonymous originally announced the attack via Twitter and posted contact information, schedules, badge numbers, and additional information of Oakland police officers on Pastebin. "The time has come to retaliate against Oakland police via all non-violent means, beginning with 'doxing' of individual officers and particularly higher-ups involved in the department's conduct of late".

Anonymous' operation, dubbed "OpUprise," comes in response to Tuesday night's police action towards a demonstration organized to protest the clearing of an encampment where Occupy Oakland members had been staying. Hackers have also targeted bankers, former U.S. Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin, and an on duty New York police officer. They have also threatened to take down the Fox News website over its ongoing coverage of the protests.

DHS ROLE:

US-CERT has reached out to the FBI and MS-ISAC. MS-ISAC responded that all posts appear to contain publicly available information such as phone numbers, officer names, and badge numbers. MS-ISAC leadership will further review to determine the PII status of this information and whether PII notification is required.

INTERAGENCY / PRIVATE SECTOR ROLE:

US-CERT received notification from MS-ISAC that, as of this time, MS-ISAC has not concluded that any PII was posted to Pastebin.

SUBJECT: US-CERT Leadership Awareness Notice: AntiSec Releases Compromised Law Enforcement Data [INITIAL]

EXECUTIVE OVERVIEW:

Via a post to Pastebin, Anonymous-related hacker group AntiSec claims to have compromised data from several law enforcement groups after compromising web servers of The International Association of Chiefs of Police (IACP), the Matrix Group web development group, the Boston Police Patrolmen's Association, and Alabama Police Department targets in the Birmingham/Jefferson County area. AntiSec claims the actions were in solidarity with the Occupy movement and the International Day of Action Against Police Brutality (October 22).

The Pastebin post contained the username/password and contact information/PII of the CEO of Matrix Group. The disclosure on pastebin also contained IACP webserver database information and a the contact list for the IACP.

AntiSec's post also includes webserver database information from the website of the Sheriff of Baldwin County, AL. The Sheriff's Office confirmed this is the second time their site was attacked in the past week, and said one of the hackers called their office to explain why they were attacked.

AntiSec claims to have additional compromised data that is listed below, but have not publicly disclosed it. They have not communicated a planned date of release of the data.

INTERNATIONAL CHIEF OF POLICE TARGETS:

- IACP membership rosters (16,000 names, addresses, member numbers, phone numbers, etc)
- Databases for all IACP related websites including login/password info
- DISCOVERPOLICECAREERS.ORG Internal Documents (250MB of PDFs, DOCs)
- POLICEVOLUNTEER.ORG Private Email List 2005-2011 and 340MB of Documents

BOSTON POLICE PATROLMEN'S ASSOCIATION:

- 1000 full names and cleartext user-supplied passwords.

ALABAMA POLICE TARGETS:

MATRIX GROUP:

- Full contact database including names, addresses, passwords for hundreds of employees and clients, and internal development notes for intranet and clients' portals

DHS ROLE:

US-CERT contacted the Matrix Group for additional information and offered assistance. Matrix advised the US-CERT that they are working with Law Enforcement (LE). US-CERT is working with MS-ISAC.

INTERAGENCY / PRIVATE SECTOR ROLE:

MS-ISAC is investigating the attack on the police websites. The State of Alabama raised

Cyber alert level to elevated yellow due to significant havtivist activity. Matrix Group and the International Association of Chiefs of Police (IACP) is working with the USSS.

Scott/Bob,

WSJ is asking if there has been any change in security or posture at the Federal Reserve in DC since the Occupy Wall Street protests, and for that matter, the Federal Reserve building in NYC. Anecdotal, he says he knows that the car barriers have been raised up (the kind that come up out of the street on hydraulics), but given the Federal Reserves proximity to the State Department, it could be unrelated to the OWS protests.

Can you guys please check in with FPS?

Given the media coverage and the fact we put an NCCIC bulletin out on this, there's a chance we may get questions about the Occupy Wall Street protests.

I'm thinking we just make clear that using social media organize protests is well within constitutional rights; when it becomes our business if social media is used by hacktivist groups to plan cyber attacks. Greg, in particular, is this a question you have fielded before?

WHITE HOUSE PRESS SECRETARY JAY CARNEY HOLDS WHITE HOUSE REGULAR NEWS BRIEFING
 WHITE HOUSE REGULAR NEWS BRIEFING
 NOVEMBER 1, 2011

SPEAKER: WHITE HOUSE PRESS SECRETARY JAY CARNEY

[*] CARNEY: Good afternoon, ladies and gentlemen. Welcome to the White House. Thanks for being here for your daily briefing. I don't have any announcements to make at the top, so I'll go straight to your questions.

QUESTION: Thank you. I'd like to talk about the Occupy movements. In Portland last night federal security officers joined with Portland police in clearing out and arresting campers who were staying overnight in a federal plaza.

What is the federal policy on dealing with these protesters?

CARNEY: Well, this is, I think, a unique circumstance, the first of its kind. I would -- I would refer to DHS in this case, because it was -- involved, I think, the Federal Protective Service, as well as local Portland authorities.

You know, our broad posture here is that we understand the frustrations that have been expressed by many Americans in different cities across the country about, broadly speaking, the economy, and also about the need for Wall Street to, you know, work by the same rules that Main Street works by.

It's also the case, as I said in answer to questions about situations in other cities, that it -- you know, everyone needs to behave, handle themselves in a lawful way. And -- but I don't have anything specific about that particular incident.

QUESTION: I just didn't know if that was usual for them to be involved.

CARNEY: Well, I think the case -- the issue here was that it was federal property. So it, just as, you know, something happens in one of the federal parks here might involve the National Park Service or something like that. So I think that was the -- the reason in this case.

Chris,

Heads up – an organization is planning to protest at the State Department’s conference tomorrow at the Ronald Reagan Building on the Keystone pipeline to Canada -- <http://www.wearepowershift.org/blogs/climate-movement-stands-occupywallst-tonight-well-occupystatedept> -- they’re trying to model the Occupy Wall Street group.

It looks like some are going to spend the night at the RRB. They have a permit to stay at Freedom Plaza across the street, but people are not allowed to sleep in the RRB or on the sidewalk out front (though the building is open 24 hours, and so they can go inside if they go through security and can stay as long as they remain peaceful). If people attempt to set up camp to sleep in the building, FPS will ask them to leave and if they refuse, they will be arrested (by either FPS or DC Police Department, whoever responds first).

Below is a draft statement to have at the ready, if that happens.

(b) (5)

Let me know if this works, and if you have any questions.

Thanks,

Scott

Hacker group Anonymous draws increased scrutiny from feds

By: PAUL ELIAS | 09/11/11 2:12 PM
Associated Press

Anonymous is not so anonymous anymore. The computer hackers, chat room denizens and young people who comprise the loosely affiliated Internet collective have increasingly turned to questionable tactics, drawing the attention of the FBI, the Department of Homeland Security and other federal investigators. What was once a small group of pranksters has become a potential national security threat, federal officials say. The FBI has carried out more than 75 raids and arrested 16 people this year in connection with illegal hacking jobs claimed by Anonymous.

Since June, the Department of Homeland Security has issued three "bulletins" warning cyber-security professionals of hacking successes and future threats by Anonymous and related groups, including a call to physically occupy Manhattan's Wall Street on Sept. 17 in protest of various U.S. government policies.

San Francisco police arrested more than 40 protesters last month during a rowdy demonstration organized by Anonymous that disrupted the evening commute. The group called for the demonstration after the Bay Area Rapid Transit system shut off its cell service in San Francisco stations to quell a planned protest over police shooting on a subway platform.

"Anonymous' activities increased throughout 2011 with a number of high-profile attacks targeting both public and private sector entities," one of the bulletins issued last month said.

Some members of the group have also called for shutting down Facebook in November over privacy issues, although other Anonymous followers are disavowing such an attack - underscoring just how loosely organized the group is and how problematic it is to police.

"Anonymous insist they have no centralized operational leadership, which has been a significant hurdle for government and law enforcement entities attempting to curb their actions," an Aug. 1 Homeland Security bulletin noted. "With that being said, we assess with high confidence that Anonymous and associated groups will continue to exploit vulnerable publicly available Web servers, websites, computer networks, and other digital information mediums for the foreseeable future."

Followers posting to Twitter and chatting in Internet Relay Channels insist there are no defined leaders of Anonymous and that it's more of a philosophy than a formal club, though a small group of members do the most organizing online.

"Anonymous is not a group, it does not have leaders, people can do ANYTHING under the flag of their country," wrote one of the more vocal members who asked not to be identified.

"Anything can be a threat to National Security, really," the member said in an email interview. "Any hacker group can be."

The member said that the group as a whole wasn't a national security threat, but conceded some individuals acting as Anonymous may be considered dangerous.

DHS' latest bulletin, issued Sept. 3, warned the group has been using social media networks to urge followers working in the financial industry to sabotage their employers' computer systems.

The DHS warning comes on the heels of several Anonymous-led protests of the Bay Area's transit agency that led to FBI raids of 35 homes and dozens of arrests, as well as to the indictment of 14 followers in July on felony computer hacking charges in connection with a coordinated "denial of service attack" against Paypal's website last year.

Security officials said the "DDoS" attacks occur when a website is overwhelmed by malicious messages carried out by thousands of followers, usually with easily downloadable software.

"Anonymous has shown through recently reported incidents that it has members who have relatively more advanced technical capabilities who can also marshal large numbers of willing, but less technical, participants for DDoS activities," the August DHS bulletin said.

Anonymous orchestrated the crashing of Paypal late last year after the online financial service suspended Wikileaks' account after the website published confidential diplomatic cables and other sensitive U.S. government intelligence. The group also targeted Visa, Mastercard and others for the same reason and has carried out several other hacks during the year. Last month, for example, the group claimed responsibility for hacking a website belonging to the Bay Area Rapid Transit agency and releasing personal information of 2,000 passengers. "Anonymous is incredibly active," said Josh Shaul, chief technology officer of Application Security, Inc., a New York-based provider of database security software. It's rare to have a hacking group willing to work outside of the shadows. These guys are quite brazen."

Anonymous emerged in 2003 from an Internet chat channel where members organized random Web incidents for their own amusement. By 2008, the prankster nature of Anonymous morphed into "hacktivism," where members sabotaged websites and leaked confidential information for political purposes.

Investigators suspect a splinter Anonymous group known as LulzSec was responsible for a June 15 denial of service attack on the CIA's public website.

This summer, Anonymous claimed credit for hacking into a Booz Allen Hamilton website and leaking email addresses of 90,000 U.S. military personnel and hacking a Monsanto Co. website and releasing personal data of 2,500 employees.

Until July, law enforcement officials around the world had arrested just a handful of suspected hackers thought to be affiliated with Anonymous. But on July 19, the FBI fanned out across the United States and raided more than 35 homes, seizing dozens of computers and arrested 16 on charges that they participated in the Paypal attack. In response, Anonymous said it hacked a website on Sept. 1 belonging to police chiefs in Texas. The group posted personal information such as emails about internal investigations before the site was shut down.

Hi Chris,

Working on a story about this occupywallstreet movement. Just as a heads up, when we used "obtained by," we need to have a line in the story saying that someone confirmed the contents of the memo. Can I put this line in the story?

"Chris Ortman, a spokesman for the Department of Homeland Security, confirmed the contents of the bulletin."

Thanks again.

As discussed, I'm providing the bulletin under 'as obtained' conditions. You can use the below explanation on background from a DHS official.

Thanks for your patience. - Chris

ON BACKGROUND (DHS official)

DHS' National Cybersecurity and Communications Integration Center (NCCIC) routinely shares actionable cybersecurity information with federal, state, local and private sector partners. This September 2 bulletin is an example of that collaboration and open communication.

This NCCIC bulletin is derived from unclassified, open-source information, and is intended to provide a more comprehensive understanding of recent cyber activity. It is also intended to give perspective on this activity to those in our critical infrastructure community, and provide recommendations on how to protect against and, if needed, respond to incidents.

We're getting inquiries from CBS, AP, Daily Caller, Salon and others on an un-sourced Examiner.com piece that says DHS and FBI are collaborating with cities by providing tactics and information on removing Occupy protestors. A check of I&A and FPS shows that this type of outreach is not occurring in any wholesale manner. Please see below clarifying DHS/FPS' role in law enforcement around protest sites:

"We are treating all of these protests nationwide as peaceful demonstrations. If a protest area is located on Federal property and has been deemed unsanitary or unsafe by the General Services Administration (GSA) or city officials, and they make a decision to evacuate participants, the Federal Protective Service will work with those officials to develop a plan to ensure the security and safety of everyone involved."

ON BACKGROUND

- FPS only has jurisdiction when a protest takes place on federal property, and in some cases, shares that jurisdiction with local authorities.

The GSA is the permitting authority for protests on federal property.

- DHS is not actively coordinating with local law enforcement agencies and/or city governments concerning the evictions of Occupy encampments writ large.
- FPS has only been involved in one instance in removing protestors, in Portland, OR. FPS was assisting the Portland Police Bureau at the federally-owned Terry Schrunk Plaza where FPS arrested several people.

Matt,

Since these protests are lawfully protected First Amendment activities, we are treating all "Occupy" demonstrations as peaceful. We are working with GSA and each city government to ensure that all parties concerned are safe and secure.

When a protest area on Federal property is deemed unsanitary or unsafe by GSA or a city, we work with those officials to develop a plan to evacuate the participants in a safe manner.

We have held standard coordination calls and face-to-face meetings with our partners to ensure that the proper resources are available for operations such as street closures, etc. The only eviction FPS has been involved with was assisting the Portland Police Bureau at the federally-owned Terry Schunk Plaza where FPS arrested two people.

Chris,

Heads up – an organization is planning to protest at the State Department’s conference tomorrow at the Ronald Reagan Building on the Keystone pipeline to Canada -- <http://www.wearepowershift.org/blogs/climate-movement-stands-occupywallst-tonight-well-occupystatedept> -- they’re trying to model the Occupy Wall Street group.

It looks like some are going to spend the night at the RRB. They have a permit to stay at Freedom Plaza across the street, but people are not allowed to sleep in the RRB or on the sidewalk out front (though the building is open 24 hours, and so they can go inside if they go through security and can stay as long as they remain peaceful). If people attempt to set up camp to sleep in the building, FPS will ask them to leave and if they refuse, they will be arrested (by either FPS or DC Police Department, whoever responds first).

Below is a draft statement to have at the ready, if that happens.

Hacker group Anonymous draws increased scrutiny from feds

By: PAUL ELIAS | 09/11/11 2:12 PM
Associated Press

Anonymous is not so anonymous anymore. The computer hackers, chat room denizens and young people who comprise the loosely affiliated Internet collective have increasingly turned to questionable tactics, drawing the attention of the FBI, the Department of Homeland Security and other federal investigators.

What was once a small group of pranksters has become a potential national security threat, federal officials say. The FBI has carried out more than 75 raids and arrested 16 people this year in connection with illegal hacking jobs claimed by Anonymous.

Since June, the Department of Homeland Security has issued three "bulletins" warning cyber-security professionals of hacking successes and future threats by Anonymous and related groups, including a call to physically occupy Manhattan's Wall Street on Sept. 17 in protest of various U.S. government policies.

San Francisco police arrested more than 40 protesters last month during a rowdy demonstration organized by Anonymous that disrupted the evening commute. The group called for the demonstration after the Bay Area Rapid Transit system shut off its cell service in San Francisco stations to quell a planned protest over police shooting on a subway platform.

"Anonymous' activities increased throughout 2011 with a number of high-profile attacks targeting both public and private sector entities," one of the bulletins issued last month said.

Some members of the group have also called for shutting down Facebook in November over privacy issues, although other Anonymous followers are disavowing such an attack - underscoring just how loosely organized the group is and how problematic it is to police.

"Anonymous insist they have no centralized operational leadership, which has been a significant hurdle for government and law enforcement entities attempting to curb their actions," an Aug. 1 Homeland Security bulletin noted. "With that being said, we assess with high confidence that Anonymous and associated groups will continue to exploit vulnerable publicly available Web servers, websites, computer networks, and other digital information mediums for the foreseeable future."

Followers posting to Twitter and chatting in Internet Relay Channels insist there are no defined leaders of Anonymous and that it's more of a philosophy than a formal club, though a small group of members do the most organizing online.

"Anonymous is not a group, it does not have leaders, people can do ANYTHING under the flag of their country," wrote one of the more vocal members who asked not to be identified.

"Anything can be a threat to National Security, really," the member said in an email interview. "Any hacker group can be." The member said that the group as a whole wasn't a national security threat, but conceded some individuals acting as Anonymous may be considered dangerous.

DHS' latest bulletin, issued Sept. 3, warned the group has been using social media networks to urge followers working in the financial industry to sabotage their employers' computer systems.

The DHS warning comes on the heels of several Anonymous-led protests of the Bay Area's transit agency that led to FBI raids of 35 homes and dozens of arrests, as well as to the indictment of 14 followers in July on felony computer hacking charges in connection with a coordinated "denial of service attack" against Paypal's website last year.

Security officials said the "DDoS" attacks occur when a website is overwhelmed by malicious messages carried out by thousands of followers, usually with easily downloadable software.

"Anonymous has shown through recently reported incidents that it has members who have relatively more advanced technical capabilities who can also marshal large numbers of willing, but less technical, participants for DDoS activities," the August DHS bulletin said.

Anonymous orchestrated the crashing of Paypal late last year after the online financial service suspended Wikileaks' account after the website published confidential diplomatic cables and other sensitive U.S. government intelligence. The group also targeted Visa, Mastercard and others for the same reason and has carried out several other hacks during the year. Last month, for example, the group claimed responsibility for hacking a website belonging to the Bay Area Rapid Transit agency and releasing personal information of 2,000 passengers.

"Anonymous is incredibly active," said Josh Shaul, chief technology officer of Application Security, Inc., a New York-based provider of database security software. It's rare to have a hacking group willing to work outside of the shadows. These guys are quite brazen."

Anonymous emerged in 2003 from an Internet chat channel where members organized random Web incidents for their own amusement. By 2008, the prankster nature of Anonymous morphed into "hacktivism," where members sabotaged websites and leaked confidential information for political purposes.

Investigators suspect a splinter Anonymous group known as LulzSec was responsible for a June 15 denial of service attack on the CIA's public website.

This summer, Anonymous claimed credit for hacking into a Booz Allen Hamilton website and leaking email addresses of 90,000 U.S. military personnel and hacking a Monsanto Co. website and releasing personal data of 2,500 employees.

Until July, law enforcement officials around the world had arrested just a handful of suspected hackers thought to be affiliated with Anonymous. But on July 19, the FBI fanned out across the United States and raided more than 35 homes, seizing dozens of computers and arrested 16 on charges that they participated in the Paypal attack.

In response, Anonymous said it hacked a website on Sept. 1 belonging to police chiefs in Texas. The group posted personal information such as emails about internal investigations before the site was shut down.

FBI investigators in court filings said that the raids and arrests were made from a list of 1,000 computer users that Paypal cyber-security workers identified as the most active attackers. The fourteen appearing in San Jose federal court have pleaded not guilty and were released on bail after promising not to access Twitter, Facebook and other social media sites. ON BACKGROUND

FPS only has jurisdiction when a protest takes place on federal property, and in some cases, shares that jurisdiction with local authorities.

The GSA is the permitting authority for protests on federal property.

I would alter the last sentence of the first para slightly:

"When a protest area on Federal property is deemed unsanitary or unsafe by GSA or a city, and they make a decision to evacuate participants, we work with those officials to develop a plan to ensure the security and safety of everyone involved."

Kris-- is that accurate?

Matt,

Since these protests are lawfully protected First Amendment activities, we are treating all "Occupy" demonstrations as peaceful. We are working with GSA and each city government to ensure that all parties concerned are safe and secure.

When a protest area on Federal property is deemed unsanitary or unsafe by GSA or a city, we work with those officials to develop a plan to evacuate the participants in a safe manner.

We have held standard coordination calls and face-to-face meetings with our partners to ensure that the proper resources are available for operations such as street closures, etc. The only eviction FPS has been involved with was assisting the Portland Police Bureau at the federally-owned Terry Schunk Plaza where FPS arrested two people.

Heads up -- an organization is planning to protest at the State Department's conference tomorrow at the Ronald Reagan Building on the Keystone pipeline to Canada -- <http://www.wearepowershift.org/blogs/climate-movement-stands-occupywallst-tonight-well-occupystatedept> -- they're trying to model the Occupy Wall Street group.

It looks like some are going to spend the night at the RRB. They have a permit to stay at Freedom Plaza across the street, but people are not allowed to sleep in the RRB or on the sidewalk out front (though the building is open 24 hours, and so they can go inside if they go through security and can stay as long as they remain peaceful). If people attempt to set up camp to sleep in the building, FPS will ask them to leave and if they refuse, they will be arrested (by either FPS or DC Police Department, whoever responds first).

Below is a draft statement to have at the ready, if that happens.

I'm also interested in asking someone a couple of questions about this movement.

Hacker group Anonymous draws increased scrutiny from feds

By: PAUL ELIAS | 09/11/11 2:12 PM
Associated Press

Anonymous is not so anonymous anymore.
The computer hackers, chat room denizens and young people who comprise the loosely affiliated Internet collective have increasingly turned to questionable tactics, drawing the attention of the FBI, the Department of Homeland Security and other federal investigators.

What was once a small group of pranksters has become a potential national security threat, federal officials say. The FBI has carried out more than 75 raids and arrested 16 people this year in connection with illegal hacking jobs claimed by Anonymous.

Since June, the Department of Homeland Security has issued three "bulletins" warning cyber-security professionals of hacking successes and future threats by Anonymous and related groups, including a call to physically occupy Manhattan's Wall Street on Sept. 17 in protest of various U.S. government policies.

San Francisco police arrested more than 40 protesters last month during a rowdy demonstration organized by Anonymous that disrupted the evening commute. The group called for the demonstration after the Bay Area Rapid Transit system shut off its cell service in San Francisco stations to quell a planned protest over police shooting on a subway platform.

"Anonymous' activities increased throughout 2011 with a number of high-profile attacks targeting both public and private sector entities," one of the bulletins issued last month said.

Some members of the group have also called for shutting down Facebook in November over privacy issues, although other Anonymous followers are disavowing such an attack - underscoring just how loosely organized the group is and how problematic it is to police.

"Anonymous insist they have no centralized operational leadership, which has been a significant hurdle for government and law enforcement entities attempting to curb their actions," an Aug. 1 Homeland Security bulletin noted. "With that being said, we assess with high confidence that Anonymous and associated groups will continue to exploit vulnerable publicly available Web servers, websites, computer networks, and other digital information mediums for the foreseeable future."

Followers posting to Twitter and chatting in Internet Relay Channels insist there are no defined leaders of Anonymous and that it's more of a philosophy than a formal club, though a small group of members do the most organizing online.

"Anonymous is not a group, it does not have leaders, people can do ANYTHING under the flag of their country," wrote one of the more vocal members who asked not to be identified.

"Anything can be a threat to National Security, really," the member said in an email interview. "Any hacker group can be." The member said that the group as a whole wasn't a national security threat, but conceded some individuals acting as Anonymous may be considered dangerous.

DHS' latest bulletin, issued Sept. 3, warned the group has been using social media networks to urge followers working in the financial industry to sabotage their employers' computer systems.

The DHS warning comes on the heels of several Anonymous-led protests of the Bay Area's transit agency that led to FBI raids of 35 homes and dozens of arrests, as well as to the indictment of 14 followers in July on felony computer hacking charges in connection with a coordinated "denial of service attack" against Paypal's website last year.

Security officials said the "DDoS" attacks occur when a website is overwhelmed by malicious messages carried out by thousands of followers, usually with easily downloadable software.

"Anonymous has shown through recently reported incidents that it has members who have relatively more advanced technical capabilities who can also marshal large numbers of willing, but less technical, participants for DDoS activities," the August DHS bulletin said.

Anonymous orchestrated the crashing of Paypal late last year after the online financial service suspended Wikileaks' account after the website published confidential diplomatic cables and other sensitive U.S. government intelligence. The group also targeted Visa, Mastercard and others for the same reason and has carried out several other hacks during the year. Last month, for example, the group claimed responsibility for hacking a website belonging to the Bay Area Rapid Transit agency and releasing personal information of 2,000 passengers.

"Anonymous is incredibly active," said Josh Shaul, chief technology officer of Application Security, Inc., a New York-based provider of database security software. It's rare to have a hacking group willing to work outside of the shadows. These guys are quite brazen."

Anonymous emerged in 2003 from an Internet chat channel where members organized random Web incidents for their own amusement. By 2008, the prankster nature of Anonymous morphed into "hacktivism," where members sabotaged websites and leaked confidential information for political purposes.

Investigators suspect a splinter Anonymous group known as LulzSec was responsible for a June 15 denial of service attack on the CIA's public website.

This summer, Anonymous claimed credit for hacking into a Booz Allen Hamilton website and leaking email addresses of 90,000 U.S. military personnel and hacking a Monsanto Co. website and releasing personal data of 2,500 employees.

Until July, law enforcement officials around the world had arrested just a handful of suspected hackers thought to be affiliated with Anonymous. But on July 19, the FBI fanned out across the United States and raided more than 35 homes, seizing dozens of computers and arrested 16 on charges that they participated in the Paypal attack.

In response, Anonymous said it hacked a website on Sept. 1 belonging to police chiefs in Texas. The group posted personal information such as emails about internal investigations before the site was shut down.

FBI investigators in court filings said that the raids and arrests were made from a list of 1,000 computer users that Paypal cyber-security workers identified as the most active attackers. The fourteen appearing in San Jose federal court have pleaded not guilty and were released on bail after promising not to access Twitter, Facebook and other social media sites. The DHS defines script kiddies as: "Unskilled individuals who use scripts or programs developed by others to attack computer systems and networks and deface w

Most of the defendants were younger than 30. Security experts and the Department of Homeland Security say most of Anonymous followers are so-called "script kiddies," young people who carry out the attacks and who are "less skilled hackers" than the vocal group members who call for the protests and attacks.

Occupy Wall Street Crackdowns: Was The Federal Government Involved?

In the wake of raids on Occupy Wall Street encampments in multiple cities, some, like AlterNet, have wondered whether federal law enforcement spent time and resources coordinating with local authorities to crackdown on the protests.

On Tuesday, The Examiner published a story quoting an anonymous Justice Department official who said local police agencies "had received tactical and planning advice from national agencies" including the FBI and Homeland Security.

That assertion was denied by the FBI in an official response sent to The Huffington Post.

"Recent published blogs and news stories have reported the FBI has coordinated with local police departments on strategy and tactics to be employed in addressing Occupy Wall Street protestors," the response said. "These reports are false. At no time has the FBI engaged with local police in this capacity."

The Examiner's source, who still reportedly stands by his story insists that the FBI advised local law enforcement on press relations, including "one presentation suggesting that any moves to evict protesters be coordinated for a time when the press was the least likely to be present."

The Department of Homeland Security (DHS) did not respond to request for comment from HuffPost by deadline. But on background, department officials did tell The Examiner that the department played a "limited" role in breaking up the encampments.

Homeland Security's involvement included making several arrests at a federally owned plaza in Portland.

Nevertheless, DHS officials told The Examiner the department is "not actively coordinating with local governments or police agencies on the 'Occupy' evictions," a statement that "leaves a lot of room for advice, both tactical and otherwise," according to journalist Rick Ellis.

In New York City, NYPD spokesperson Paul Browne told HuffPost that his department did not work with any federal authorities before or after the raid on Zuccotti Park.

"NYPD enforcement action re: OWS was accomplished with no involvement by federal authorities (no coordination with them either)," Browne said in an email.

Occupy protester Max Berger, who is a member of the OWS direct action working group, said he's not sure the feds are being honest about their involvement in the raids. Berger told HuffPost he was arrested during the Zuccotti raid and held for 24 hours before being let go without any charges.

"I would be surprised if there was not some federal level of planning involved, in spite of what they say," Berger said. "They don't want that story out there. We're coordinating nationally, so why wouldn't they?"

Two civil rights groups seem to share Berger's skepticism. The Partnership for Civil Justice Fund and the National Lawyers Guild Mass Defense Committee have filed a Freedom of Information request for any communications between federal law enforcement agencies and local police related to the protests, according to The Examiner report.

On Tuesday, the Associated Press reported that mayors and police chiefs in cities around the country strategized with each other about how to deal with the Occupy protests.

From the AP:

As concerns over safety and sanitation grew at the encampments over the last month, officials from nearly 40 cities turned to each other on conference calls, sharing what worked and what hasn't as they grappled with the leaderless movement.

Berger said he believed all of the effort spent arresting and charging protestors would have been better spent investigating and prosecuting those responsible for the economic crisis -- a common complaint in the Occupy Wall Street movement.

"It speaks to how this country works right now that we saw such a giant investment in resources and huge amount of concern directed at the occupation while Wall Street gets off scot-free," Berger said. "If they spent half the time worrying about how to go after those criminals as they did going after us, we wouldn't even need to be out there."

ON BACKGROUND

- DHS is not actively coordinating with local law enforcement agencies and/or city governments concerning the evictions of Occupy encampments writ large.
- FPS only has jurisdiction when a protest takes place on federal property, and in some cases, shares that jurisdiction with local authorities.

Occupy Wall Street Crackdowns: Was The Federal Government Involved?

In the wake of raids on Occupy Wall Street encampments in multiple cities, some, like AlterNet, have wondered whether federal law enforcement spent time and resources coordinating with local authorities to crackdown on the protests.

On Tuesday, The Examiner published a story quoting an anonymous Justice Department official who said local police agencies "had received tactical and planning advice from national agencies" including the FBI and Homeland Security.

That assertion was denied by the FBI in an official response sent to The Huffington Post.

"Recent published blogs and news stories have reported the FBI has coordinated with local police departments on strategy and tactics to be employed in addressing Occupy Wall Street protestors," the response said. "These reports are false. At no time has the FBI engaged with local police in this capacity."

The Examiner's source, who still reportedly stands by his story insists that the FBI advised local law enforcement on press relations, including "one presentation suggesting that any moves to evict protesters be coordinated for a time when the press was the least likely to be present."

The Department of Homeland Security (DHS) did not respond to request for comment from HuffPost by deadline. But on background, department officials did tell The Examiner that the department played a "limited" role in breaking up the encampments.

Homeland Security's involvement included making several arrests at a federally owned plaza in Portland.

Nevertheless, DHS officials told The Examiner the department is "not actively coordinating with local governments or police agencies on the 'Occupy' evictions," a statement that "leaves a lot of room for advice, both tactical and otherwise," according to journalist Rick Ellis.

In New York City, NYPD spokesperson Paul Browne told HuffPost that his department did not work with any federal authorities before or after the raid on Zuccotti Park.

"NYPD enforcement action re: OWS was accomplished with no involvement by federal authorities (no coordination with them either)," Browne said in an email.

Occupy protester Max Berger, who is a member of the OWS direct action working group, said he's not sure the feds are being honest about their involvement in the raids. Berger told HuffPost he was arrested during the Zuccotti raid and held for 24 hours before being let go without any charges.

"I would be surprised if there was not some federal level of planning involved, in spite of what they say," Berger said. "They don't want that story out there. We're coordinating nationally, so why wouldn't they?"

Two civil rights groups seem to share Berger's skepticism. The Partnership for Civil Justice Fund and the National Lawyers Guild Mass Defense Committee have filed a Freedom of Information request for any communications between federal law enforcement agencies and local police related to the protests, according to The Examiner report.

On Tuesday, the Associated Press reported that mayors and police chiefs in cities around the country strategized with each other about how to deal with the Occupy protests.

From the AP:

As concerns over safety and sanitation grew at the encampments over the last month, officials from nearly 40 cities turned to each other on conference calls, sharing what worked and what hasn't as they grappled with the leaderless movement.

Berger said he believed all of the effort spent arresting and charging protestors would have been better spent investigating and prosecuting those responsible for the economic crisis -- a common complaint in the Occupy Wall Street movement.

"It speaks to how this country works right now that we saw such a giant investment in resources and huge amount of concern directed at the occupation while Wall Street gets off scot-free," Berger said. "If they spent half the time worrying about how to go after those criminals as they did going after us, we wouldn't even need to be out there."

Matt,

Since these protests are lawfully protected First Amendment activities, we are treating all "Occupy" demonstrations as peaceful. We are working with GSA and each city government to ensure that all parties concerned are safe and secure. When a protest area on Federal property is deemed unsanitary or unsafe by GSA or a city, we work with those officials to develop a plan to evacuate the participants in a safe manner.

We have held standard coordination calls and face-to-face meetings with our partners to ensure that the proper resources are available for operations such as street closures, etc. The only eviction FPS has been involved with was assisting the Portland Police Bureau at the federally-owned Terry Schruck Plaza where FPS arrested two people.

We'd like to request comment from the Department of Homeland Security concerning whether it, or any other federal agencies, offered any kind of assistance or advice to municipalities looking to dismantle their own Anti-Wallstreet "Occupy" protests.

Published reports note a relationship between the federal government and cities orchestrating the removal of "Occupy protestors" from makeshift camp sites.

We're getting inquiries from CBS, AP, Daily Caller, Salon and others on an un-sourced Examiner.com piece that says DHS and FBI are collaborating with cities by providing tactics and information on removing Occupy protestors. Matt,

Since these protests are lawfully protected First Amendment activities, we are treating all "Occupy" demonstrations as peaceful. We are working with GSA and each city government to ensure that all parties concerned are safe and secure.

When a protest area on Federal property is deemed unsanitary or unsafe by GSA or a city, we work with those officials to develop a plan to evacuate the participants in a safe manner.

We have held standard coordination calls and face-to-face meetings with our partners to ensure that the proper resources are available for operations such as street closures, etc. The only eviction FPS has been involved with was assisting the Portland Police Bureau at the federally-owned Terry Schunk Plaza where FPS arrested two people.

Hi there,

My name is Bigad Shaban and I am a correspondent with CBS News (national).

We'd like to request comment from the Department of Homeland Security concerning whether it, or any other federal agencies, offered any kind of assistance or advice to municipalities looking to dismantle their own Anti-Wallstreet "Occupy" protests.

Published reports note a relationship between the federal government and cities orchestrating the removal of "Occupy protestors" from makeshift camp sites.

FPS only has jurisdiction when a protest takes place on federal property, and in some cases, shares that jurisdiction with local authorities.

The GSA is the permitting authority for protests on federal property.

DHS is not actively coordinating with local law enforcement agencies and/or city governments concerning the evictions of Occupy encampments writ large.

Hello –

Thanks for your inquiry. Off the record, I'm happy to look into this, but there doesn't seem to be a source of this allegation. I read the underlying documents, and there is nothing attributed to DHS, beyond a vague mention of "homeland security" that could easily be a state department of homeland security. Will circle back.

Thanks,

Dear DHS,

Reuters is doing a story about the coordinated clearing of Occupy Wall Street encampments across the country. Our question is, did the Department of Homeland Security and/or the FBI help mayors coordinate the clearing of the sites? How?

Any assistance would be greatly appreciated.

Hello –

Thanks for your inquiry. Off the record, I'm happy to look into this, but there doesn't seem to be a source of this allegation. I read the underlying documents, and there is nothing attributed to DHS, beyond a vague mention of "homeland security" that could easily be a state department of homeland security. Will circle back.

Thanks,

Matt

Yes ma'am, on Tuesday, November 1, 2011 at approximately 4:30 a.m. FPS and Portland Police Bureau officers moved into Terry Shrunken Park in downtown Portland to evict a number of "Occupy Portland" protesters who had set up tents in the federal park. Approximately 12 tents had been set up and about 20 protesters were present. FPS personnel ordered the protesters to depart since overnight camping is not allowed in the park and about half of the people present complied and departed. 10 protesters refused to leave and were arrested for failure to comply with the lawful order of a Federal police officer.

As I thought, I&A scrupulously avoided any connection with the Occupy movement/protests/dismantlings. We cannot speak for any individual fusion center or other departmental component, but we issued no product to our customers and held no conf call with our field IOs on the subject.

An IP contractor apparently posted an uncleared Tripwire product to the website, but it was pulled down. A recipient of that product then had it posted to the DSAC website – which I'll forward separately – and DUS Scalici had it pulled down.

Hi there,

My name is Bigad Shaban and I am a correspondent with CBS News (national).

We'd like to request comment from the Department of Homeland Security concerning whether it, or any other federal agencies, offered any kind of assistance or advice to municipalities looking to dismantle their own Anti-Wallstreet "Occupy" protests.

Published reports note a relationship between the federal government and cities orchestrating the removal of "Occupy protestors" from makeshift camp sites.

- New York, NY--MMC IOI #6379-11

Location: New York, New York

In a video posted on YouTube after Occupy Wall Street (OWS) protesters were evicted from Zuccotti Park in New York City, demonstrators have threatened to "burn New York City to the ground" on Thursday, 17 November.

Later in the video, in an apparent threat to businesses in the city, one demonstrator goes on to say, "In a few days, you're going to see what a Molotov cocktail can do to a Macy's."

Meanwhile, the official OWS movement has reiterated its call for only nonviolent action during its marches and rallies planned for the same day to mark its two-month anniversary.

Scott/Bob,

WSJ is asking if there has been any change in security or posture at the Federal Reserve in DC since the Occupy Wall Street protests, and for that matter, the Federal Reserve building in NYC. Anecdotal, he says he knows that the car barriers have been raised up (the kind that come up out of the street on hydraulics), but given the Federal Reserve's proximity to the State Department, it could be unrelated to the OWS protests.

Can you guys please check in with FPS?

Chris,

Heads up – an organization is planning to protest at the State Department’s conference tomorrow at the Ronald Reagan Building on the Keystone pipeline to Canada – <http://www.wearepowershift.org/blogs/climate-movement-stands-occupywallst-tonight-well-occupystatedept> -- they’re trying to model the Occupy Wall Street group.

It looks like some are going to spend the night at the RRB. They have a permit to stay at Freedom Plaza across the street, but people are not allowed to sleep in the RRB or on the sidewalk out front (though the building is open 24 hours, and so they can go inside if they go through security and can stay as long as they remain peaceful). If people attempt to set up camp to sleep in the building, FPS will ask them to leave and if they refuse, they will be arrested (by either FPS or DC Police Department, whoever responds first).

Below is a draft statement to have at the ready, if that happens.

(b) (5)

Let me know if this works, and if you have any questions.

Thanks,

Scott

Occupy Wall Street Crackdowns: Was The Federal Government Involved?

In the wake of raids on Occupy Wall Street encampments in multiple cities, some, like AlterNet, have wondered whether federal law enforcement spent time and resources coordinating with local authorities to crackdown on the protests.

On Tuesday, The Examiner published a story quoting an anonymous Justice Department official who said local police agencies "had received tactical and planning advice from national agencies" including the FBI and Homeland Security.

That assertion was denied by the FBI in an official response sent to The Huffington Post.

"Recent published blogs and news stories have reported the FBI has coordinated with local police departments on strategy and tactics to be employed in addressing Occupy Wall Street protestors," the response said. "These reports are false. At no time has the FBI engaged with local police in this capacity."

The Examiner's source, who still reportedly stands by his story insists that the FBI advised local law enforcement on press relations, including "one presentation suggesting that any moves to evict protesters be coordinated for a time when the press was the least likely to be present."

The Department of Homeland Security (DHS) did not respond to request for comment from HuffPost by deadline. But on background, department officials did tell The Examiner that the department played a "limited" role in breaking up the encampments.

Homeland Security's involvement included making several arrests at a federally owned plaza in Portland.

Nevertheless, DHS officials told The Examiner the department is "not actively coordinating with local governments or police agencies on the 'Occupy' evictions," a statement that "leaves a lot of room for advice, both tactical and otherwise," according to journalist Rick Ellis.

In New York City, NYPD spokesperson Paul Browne told HuffPost that his department did not work with any federal authorities before or after the raid on Zuccotti Park.

"NYPD enforcement action re: OWS was accomplished with no involvement by federal authorities (no coordination with them either)," Browne said in an email.

Occupy protester Max Berger, who is a member of the OWS direct action working group, said he's not sure the feds are being honest about their involvement in the raids. Berger told HuffPost he was arrested during the Zuccotti raid and held for 24 hours before being let go without any charges.

"I would be surprised if there was not some federal level of planning involved, in spite of what they say," Berger said. "They don't want that story out there. We're coordinating nationally, so why wouldn't they?"

Two civil rights groups seem to share Berger's skepticism. The Partnership for Civil Justice Fund and the National Lawyers Guild Mass Defense Committee have filed a Freedom of Information request for any communications between federal law enforcement agencies and local police related to the protests, according to The Examiner report.

On Tuesday, the Associated Press reported that mayors and police chiefs in cities around the country strategized with each other about how to deal with the Occupy protests.

From the AP:

As concerns over safety and sanitation grew at the encampments over the last month, officials from nearly 40 cities turned to each other on conference calls, sharing what worked and what hasn't as they grappled with the leaderless movement.

Berger said he believed all of the effort spent arresting and charging protestors would have been better spent investigating and prosecuting those responsible for the economic crisis -- a common complaint in the Occupy Wall Street movement.

"It speaks to how this country works right now that we saw such a giant investment in resources and huge amount of concern directed at the occupation while Wall Street gets off scot-free," Berger said. "If they spent half the time worrying about how to go after those criminals as they did going after us, we wouldn't even need to be out there."

Mr. McCormack –

We did not receive an inquiry for this story. You may use the following, attributable to me:

"Any decisions on how to handle specific situations are dealt with by local authorities in that location. If a protest area is located on Federal property and has been deemed unsanitary or unsafe by the General Services Administration (GSA) or city officials, and they make a decision to evacuate participants, the Federal Protective Service (FPS) will work with those officials to develop a plan to ensure the security and safety of everyone involved."

ON BACKGROUND

- DHS is not actively coordinating with local law enforcement agencies and/or city governments concerning the evictions of Occupy encampments writ large.
- FPS only has jurisdiction when a protest takes place on federal property, and in some cases, shares that jurisdiction with local authorities.
- The GSA is the permitting authority for protests on federal property.
- FPS has only been involved in one instance in removing protestors, in Portland, OR. FPS was assisting the Portland Police Bureau at the federally-owned Terry Schunk Plaza where FPS arrested several people

"I would be surprised if there was not some federal level of planning involved, in spite of what they say," Berger said. "They don't want that story out there. We're coordinating nationally, so why wouldn't they?"

Two civil rights groups seem to share Berger's skepticism. The Partnership for Civil Justice Fund and the National Lawyers Guild Mass Defense Committee have filed a Freedom of Information request for any communications between federal law enforcement agencies and local police related to the protests, according to The Examiner report.

On Tuesday, the Associated Press reported that mayors and police chiefs in cities around the country strategized with each other about how to deal with the Occupy protests.

From the AP:

As concerns over safety and sanitation grew at the encampments over the last month, officials from nearly 40 cities turned to each other on conference calls, sharing what worked and what hasn't as they grappled with the leaderless movement.

Berger said he believed all of the effort spent arresting and charging protestors would have been better spent investigating and prosecuting those responsible for the economic crisis -- a common complaint in the Occupy Wall Street movement.

"It speaks to how this country works right now that we saw such a giant investment in resources and huge amount of concern directed at the occupation while Wall Street gets off scot-free," Berger said. "If they spent half the time worrying about how to go after those criminals as they did going after us, we wouldn't even need to be out there."

Hi, I'm writing to request comment on this story which reports that Homeland and other federal agencies coordinated with local law enforcement agencies in the crackdowns on Occupy Wall Street encampments across the country. I am wondering

Is it true Homeland coordinated with local law enforcement in this fashion?

If so, why did Homeland feel it was important to work with local law enforcement in these crackdowns?

My deadline is tomorrow (Thursday). Thank you for your assistance.

Occupy Wall Street Crackdowns: Was The Federal Government Involved?

In the wake of raids on Occupy Wall Street encampments in multiple cities, some, like AlterNet, have wondered whether federal law enforcement spent time and resources coordinating with local authorities to crackdown on the protests.

On Tuesday, The Examiner published a story quoting an anonymous Justice Department official who said local police agencies "had received tactical and planning advice from national agencies" including the FBI and Homeland Security.

That assertion was denied by the FBI in an official response sent to The Huffington Post.

"Recent published blogs and news stories have reported the FBI has coordinated with local police departments on strategy and tactics to be employed in addressing Occupy Wall Street protestors," the response said. "These reports are false. At no time has the FBI engaged with local police in this capacity."

The Examiner's source, who still reportedly stands by his story insists that the FBI advised local law enforcement on press relations, including "one presentation suggesting that any moves to evict protesters be coordinated for a time when the press was the least likely to be present."

The Department of Homeland Security (DHS) did not respond to request for comment from HuffPost by deadline. But on background, department officials did tell The Examiner that the department played a "limited" role in breaking up the encampments.

Homeland Security's involvement included making several arrests at a federally owned plaza in Portland.

Nevertheless, DHS officials told The Examiner the department is "not actively coordinating with local governments or police agencies on the 'Occupy' evictions," a statement that "leaves a lot of room for advice, both tactical and otherwise," according to journalist Rick Ellis.

In New York City, NYPD spokesperson Paul Browne told HuffPost that his department did not work with any federal authorities before or after the raid on Zuccotti Park.

"NYPD enforcement action re: OWS was accomplished with no involvement by federal authorities (no coordination with them either)," Browne said in an email.

Occupy protester Max Berger, who is a member of the OWS direct action working group, said he's not sure the feds are being honest about their involvement in the raids. Berger told HuffPost he was arrested during the Zuccotti raid and held for 24 hours before being let go without any charges.

"I would be surprised if there was not some federal level of planning involved, in spite of what they say," Berger said. "They don't want that story out there. We're coordinating nationally, so why wouldn't they?"

Two civil rights groups seem to share Berger's skepticism. The Partnership for Civil Justice Fund and the National Lawyers Guild Mass Defense Committee have filed a Freedom of Information request for any communications between federal law enforcement agencies and local police related to the protests, according to The Examiner report.

Matt,

Since these protests are lawfully protected First Amendment activities, we are treating all "Occupy" demonstrations as peaceful. We are working with GSA and each city government to ensure that all parties concerned are safe and secure. When a protest area on Federal property is deemed unsanitary or unsafe by GSA or a city, we work with those officials to develop a plan to evacuate the participants in a safe manner.

We have held standard coordination calls and face-to-face meetings with our partners to ensure that the proper resources are available for operations such as street closures, etc. The only eviction FPS has been involved with was assisting the Portland Police Bureau at the federally-owned Terry Schunk Plaza where FPS arrested two people.

We're getting inquiries from CBS, AP, Daily Caller, Salon and others on an un-sourced Examiner.com piece that says DHS and FBI are collaborating with cities by providing tactics and information on removing Occupy protestors. Matt,

Since these protests are lawfully protected First Amendment activities, we are treating all "Occupy" demonstrations as peaceful. We are working with GSA and each city government to ensure that all parties concerned are safe and secure. When a protest area on Federal property is deemed unsanitary or unsafe by GSA or a city, we work with those officials to develop a plan to evacuate the participants in a safe manner.

We have held standard coordination calls and face-to-face meetings with our partners to ensure that the proper resources are available for operations such as street closures, etc. The only eviction FPS has been involved with was assisting the Portland Police Bureau at the federally-owned Terry Schunk Plaza where FPS arrested two people.

Hi there,

My name is Bigad Shaban and I am a correspondent with CBS News (national).

We'd like to request comment from the Department of Homeland Security concerning whether it, or any other federal agencies, offered any kind of assistance or advice to municipalities looking to dismantle their own Anti-Wallstreet "Occupy" protests.

Published reports note a relationship between the federal government and cities orchestrating the removal of "Occupy protestors" from makeshift camp sites.

Yes ma'am, on Tuesday, November 1, 2011 at approximately 4:30 a.m. FPS and Portland Police Bureau officers moved into Terry Shrunck Park in downtown Portland to evict a number of "Occupy Portland" protesters who had set up tents in the federal park. Approximately 12 tents had been set up and about 20 protesters were present. FPS personnel ordered the protesters to depart since overnight camping is not allowed in the park and about half of the people present complied and departed. 10 protesters refused to leave and were arrested for failure to comply with the lawful order of a Federal police officer.

With regard to FPS arrests in Portland, weren't there some arrests the week before the eviction?

Matt,

Since these protests are lawfully protected First Amendment activities, we are treating all "Occupy" demonstrations as peaceful. We are working with GSA and each city government to ensure that all parties concerned are safe and secure. When a protest area on Federal property is deemed unsanitary or unsafe by GSA or a city, we work with those officials to develop a plan to evacuate the participants in a safe manner.

We have held standard coordination calls and face-to-face meetings with our partners to ensure that the proper resources are available for operations such as street closures, etc. The only eviction FPS has been involved with was assisting the Portland Police Bureau at the federally-owned Terry Schrunck Plaza where FPS arrested two people.

As I thought, I&A scrupulously avoided any connection with the Occupy movement/protests/dismantlings. We cannot speak for any individual fusion center or other departmental component, but we issued no product to our customers and held no conf call with our field IOs on the subject.

An IP contractor apparently posted an uncleared Tripwire product to the website, but it was pulled down. A recipient of that product then had it posted to the DSAC website – which I'll forward separately – and DUS Scalici had it pulled down.

Hi there,

My name is Bigad Shaban and I am a correspondent with CBS News (national).

We'd like to request comment from the Department of Homeland Security concerning whether it, or any other federal agencies, offered any kind of assistance or advice to municipalities looking to dismantle their own Anti-Wallstreet "Occupy" protests.

Published reports note a relationship between the federal government and cities orchestrating the removal of "Occupy protestors" from makeshift camp sites.

Subject: OWS Protesters Threaten Violence, Molotov Cocktails In Response To Zuccotti Park Eviction
- New York, NY--MMC IOI #6379-11

Location: New York, New York

In a video posted on YouTube after Occupy Wall Street (OWS) protesters were evicted from Zuccotti Park in New York City, demonstrators have threatened to "burn New York City to the ground" on Thursday, 17 November.

Later in the video, in an apparent threat to businesses in the city, one demonstrator goes on to say, "In a few days, you're going to see what a Molotov cocktail can do to a Macy's."

Meanwhile, the official OWS movement has reiterated its call for only nonviolent action during its marches and rallies planned for the same day to mark its two-month anniversary.

No, there has not been a change in posture in our readiness or response. We are treating all of these protests nationwide as peaceful demonstrations.

Scott/Bob,

WSJ is asking if there has been any change in security or posture at the Federal Reserve in DC since the Occupy Wall Street protests, and for that matter, the Federal Reserve building in NYC. Anecdotal, he says he knows that the car barriers have been raised up (the kind that come up out of the street on hydraulics), but given the Federal Reserve's proximity to the State Department, it could be unrelated to the OWS protests.

Can you guys please check in with FPS?

Thanks,

Chris,

Heads up – an organization is planning to protest at the State Department’s conference tomorrow at the Ronald Reagan Building on the Keystone pipeline to Canada -- <http://www.wearepowershift.org/blogs/climate-movement-stands-occupywallst-tonight-well-occupystatedept> -- they’re trying to model the Occupy Wall Street group.

It looks like some are going to spend the night at the RRB. They have a permit to stay at Freedom Plaza across the street, but people are not allowed to sleep in the RRB or on the sidewalk out front (though the building is open 24 hours, and so they can go inside if they go through security and can stay as long as they remain peaceful). If people attempt to set up camp to sleep in the building, FPS will ask them to leave and if they refuse, they will be arrested (by either FPS or DC Police Department, whoever responds first).

Below is a draft statement to have at the ready, if that happens.

Let me know if this works, and if you have any questions.

Thanks,

Scott
